Search continues for missing man

An intensive search for a suicidal 20-year-old began Monday evening after RCMP learned the man had left his Maliview Drive residence with a large quantity of prescription medication.

"If [the medication] was completely consumed, it could be lethal," said Salt Spring RCMP Sgt. Mike Giles.

Still missing as of 4:15 p.m. Tuesday was Robert Irwin Stacey.

Local police, Salt Spring Fire Department and Salt Spring Search and Rescue personnel immediately began a search of the area assisted by an RCMP helicopter searching with infrared imaging technology.

"It was simply searching the areas of the forest floor they could look at with the forward-looking infrared camera, which essentially sends heat signals back to them, and directing the searchers to anywhere they sensed heat," said Giles.

The search continued late into the night with a ground search resuming at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday.

"They are fanning out with their call-out system. Right now there are easily 60 trained searchers in a thicket of woods in between Fern-

Pool savings identified as task force releases report

By GAIL SJUBERG Staff Writer

An indoor pool facility would cost Salt Spring property owners far less than first anticipated, a community task force has found.

The Rainbow Road Design Development Task Force, struck two months ago by the Parks and Recreation Commission (PARC), pared an initial annual tax amount of $117.11 (for an average assessed property of $313,920) to $63.10, following an in-depth analysis of potential capital and operating costs for a six-lane pool.

Task force representative Carol Dodd presented the task force report at Monday night PARC meeting, describing the process as "a fascinating exercise."

The group identified savings in several areas, she noted. Those included reducing pool opening hours and days (six days instead of seven); postponing original locker and family change room plans; postponing sauna room and pool toy plans; reducing pool deck area and lighting system requirements; using geothermal heating; and combining pool supervisor and aquatic leader staff positions.

Dodd said the group found numerous savings opportunities in the extra components put in the plan by consultants, but the group's "mantra" was "that it was important not to skimp on the core construction."

Members also found that operating cost savings had a much bigger tax impact than their capital counterpart.

"It was nine times as effective to find operating cost savings versus capital cost savings," said Dodd.

At Monday night's PARC meeting where the report recommendations were endorsed, a further $8 per household was potentially removed when commissioners unanimously agreed to put $50,000 more of PARC's existing operating funds into annual pool operation.

Firefighter association opposes cell towers

By MITCHELL SHERRIN Staff Writer

Plans for installing a cell-phone transmitter at the Ganges fire hall could be dimmed after the International Association of Fire Fighters (IAFF) recently placed a moratorium on cell-phone installations at firehalls.

"I would love to see a place like Salt Spring stand up and say, 'You know what? There's got to be a big tree just outside of town we can put [this cell transmitter] on," said Vancouver Local IAFF vice president Joe Foster

During the IAFF annual convention in Boston on August 17, fire fighters passed a resolution to seek funding for an independent study investigating the long-term health effects of cell tower radiation exposure, said Fos-

According to the convention minutes, the IAFF simply moved to undertake a joint U.S.-Canadian study of celltower effects but Foster indicated that the motion was later

POOL SAVINGS: Task force report

It had already committed some $295,000 in operating funding, consisting of all monies resulting from its decision to "tax to the max" of its bylaw limit in 2004, plus the $40,000 now paid to run Shelby Memorial Pool at Portlock Park.

The further reduction brings the estimated annual tax cost of the indoor pool to $55.10.

But all figures assume the project will receive a $2million federal-provincial infrastructure grant, which has been applied for but not approved to date.

PARC finds itself in a time crunch as the required referendum question must be finalized and approved by the Capital Regional District (CRD) board on September 8, in order for it to meet a November 20 vote date.

(Ratepayers in both the Beddis and Fulford waterworks districts will also be voting that day on the question of whether or not to join the CRD and upgrade their water systems.)

Commission members discussed logistics of seeking voter approval for funds based on an assumption that the grant will be received. Without the $2-million grant, the pool could not be completed as planned.

"If we find out that we weren't getting the grant, we could have a separate discussion about whether we were going to proceed or not," said regional director Gary Holman, who also sat on the task force.

Doug Dunlap, another task force member, asked if it was possible to seek referendum approval for the higher amount that did not include the grant, which would be an additional $35.86 per average assessed property.

The meeting heard that it was possible to get authority to borrow more funds but then not acquire all that money, but caution was expressed about unnecessarily seeking voter approval for a higher amount.

One area where more savings could still be achieved is by using an "alternate pool technology," such as a liner rather than a concrete tank.

Engineers are now doing a study of that technology to determine if it compares favourably to traditional construction methods.

Until the study is complete, no cost savings can be determined.

Several people spoke favourably about investing in "green" technologies, in part because of the long-term operating cost savings.

Ssplash president Darlene Steele asked how community members could provide input before a referendum question is crafted.

Holman said there was no time for more input at this point.

"Unfortunately, the nature of the beast is that we have to have a recommendation to the CRD by September 8... . . There is no time for community debate."

Task force members, who represented a variety of community groups and interests, reached their recommendations by consensus.

The sensitivity of how eventual numbers will be presented to voters was emphasized at the meeting.

"The way this is presented to the community is important," noted PARC operations manager and task force chair Dave Gibbon.

"[The] commission is aware we need to present this in the best light possible."

CELL TOWER OPPOSITION

"On the floor, it was further resolved that the IAFF oppose any cell towers on fire stations until an independent study has been completed showing there are no ill-health effects to our members for long-term occupational health exposures," Foster said.

Working as a fire fighter in Vancouver, Foster is exposed to enough hazards without returning home to the firehall to be bombarded by celltower radiation, he said.

"I don't think I really want to be cooked here too."

Foster refutes industry claims that the eight-watt transmitter planned for Ganges would be too small to pose a risk to local firefighters and other community members.

"Unless it's an independent [study], I wouldn't trust anything about what's coming off antennae and what's not coming off antennae."

Foster doesn't want to live and work under a cell tower unless an independent study proves the safety of expo-

"I feel sorry for the guys in Ganges. We've got two stations in Vancouver with cell phone towers and we've been trying to stop any further towers going in. We certainly appreciate the IAFF coming out opposed to the ones that are even in exis-

He's read numerous studies suggesting a causal relationship between cell towers and symptoms such as tumours, depression, severe headaches, sleep deprivation and anesthesia-like sleep.

"Firefighters are supposed to be the cream of the crop as far as healthy guys and gals go. If it's damaging them, who knows what it's doing to the rest of us."

Some might have found it ironic that Foster talked to a Driftwood reporter over a cell phone but he argued otherwise.

"I'm not opposed to cell phones. I'm not opposed to using them when I need to.

. . Our concern is that there is a long-term occupational exposure to it that we believe may cause things like brain cancer and leukemia."

Depending on the results of an independent study, the IAFF will establish protective policy for the health and safety of all fire fighters.

"I look at a trillion-dollar industry, and if there was an independent study that actually confirmed that this was 100 per cent safe — 'Don't worry about it' — don't you think we would see it? That answers my questions."

The IAFF had initially moved to fund an independent study but later amended the cell-tower resolution to seek assistance, he said.

"We realized we're up against big guns and it's a million-dollar study and we just don't have that kind of resource. So we are seeking funding from various industries or whatever to get that funding."

Michael Linehan, a spokesperson for Island Residents Opposed to Cellphone Antennae (IROCA), applauded the IAFF resolution to oppose cell towers until an independent study can be completed.

"It's huge indication of extreme concern from an organization that is, if anything, very conservative, which to me adds even more weight that they've done this. This is not some eco-activist group."

Linehan urges trustees from the Salt Spring Island Fire Protection District to follow the IAFF resolution.

"It's an enormously important step and an enormously important precedent. It's certainly my hope that even if the fire trustees are not legally bound by this resolution, they should take it with the utmost seriousness."

To allow installation of a cell tower at the Ganges firehall in light of the recent IAFF moratorium would fly in the face of reason, he said.

"I don't see how they could proceed with a cell antenna in any kind of good conscience knowing about a resolution like this.

Fire board chair Michael Schubart was unavailable for comment on the IAFF resolution before press time.

Entities won't support marina lease expansion

By GAIL SJUBERG Staff Writer

Ganges Marina will not be receiving support from the Salt Spring Local Trust Committee (LTC) or the Salt Spring Harbour Authority (SSHA) in its bid to expand its water lease area in Ganges Harbour.

Both local government bodies expressed non-support for B&B Ganges Marina Ltd.'s wish to expand its water lease eastward by about 10 metres or 33 feet so boats could legally moor on the outside of its breakwater float.

The plan would require reduction of a SSHA map reserve — or clear area in the harbour — established in 2000 for public safety purposes.

The shoreline area would also require LTC rezoning.

"I'm hesitant to increase the capacity of any marina on the island . . . until we've determined the total number of accommodation units we will have," said trustee Kimberly Lineger at last Wednesday's LTC meeting, referring to the current review of tourist accommodation land uses.

Trustee Eric Booth concurred and a motion was passed to advise the marina owners that it was "very unlikely" the LTC will favourably consider a rezoning application to increase the existing Shoreline 1 zon-

Marina project manager Robyn Kelln said a "O850 risk management review" study, which would be required before any water lease changes could be considered, has already commenced but will not be finalized for months.

He said the LTC was being "premature" in commenting on the application until it was formally submitted to Land and Water B.C., which handles Crown leases.

"At such time we trust that our trustees would examine all the pertinent information, hear arguments for and against from members of the community who wish to be heard, and listen to the individuals who would be directly affected by any decision to expand the lease or not expand the lease," he told the LTC. meeting.

The LTC recently demanded the marina comply with terms of its development permit, which stipulate no moorage take place at that

At that time Kelln said the company was reluctant to comply, partly because it was in the process of investigating lease expansion.

But acquiring a larger lease and reducing the map reserve seems unlikely to Harbour manager Bart Terwiel said the SSHA is categorically opposed to changing the map reserve.

"Any reduction in the size of the map reserve would not be in the public interest or safety," said Terwiel, referring to a letter the SSHA month, said Gauld.

has sent to various government agencies involved in the issue.

Hundreds of vessel movements take place in the harbour each day, said Terwiel, and between 40 and 50 aircraft movements.

Also at the LTC meeting. Trust regional planning manager John Gauld reviewed history of the Ganges Harbour seawalk plans, to point out the level of harbour fill anticipated with that project in 1989.

"Rip rap was to be placed out to the low water mark," said Gauld. "For Ganges Marina, the rip rap goes to the marina ramp only.

He also revisited what he called the "infamous development permit," which has been the subject of a legal opinion that it was no longer valid in any event.

"We'd be willing to sit down with people to figure out the OCP policies . . . and to try to reach a consensus [on where the fill could be placed]."

Booth said he was convinced the intention was to fill out to the low water mark at the marina location, just as it was filled in front of The Fishery.

"To say, 'Oh, we're not going to do it for the Ganges Marina property and Farmers Institute and Cudmore property flies in the face of reason."

Ganges Marina's development proposals will likely be back on the agenda next

Ferry users benefit

Islanders stand to benefit from major upgrades to the Pat Bay Highway at Swartz Bay ferry terminal, which will include a special lane for Gulf-Islands bound traffic as announced by B.C. Ferries on Thursday.

During an open house at the North Saanich Municipal Hall, B.C. Ferries unveiled plans to pay for a $2-million expansion of Highway 17 that would see a third lane added for a 2.5-kilometre stretch between Wain Road and Land's End Road before next summer.

The new third lane would only be used for reserved passengers, local traffic on Land's End Road and traffic heading to the Gulf Islands.

"So you guys don't have to get caught up in the lineup," said Deborah Marshall, B.C. Ferries communications manager for mainland services.

Road work is set to begin this fall and while it could cause some traffic delays with single-lane closures, expansion plans aim to create the least impact on customers, said Marshall.

Three different traffic options for the third lane were discussed at the open house meeting. One option includes a three-metre traffic island for pedestrian traffic and landscape features.

Another option would see a third lane without a traffic island and the third option would see a lane that could be open or closed, depending on traffic conditions.

The roadwork on Highway 17 is the first phase of a $30million, five-year upgrade of the Swartz Bay terminal that will see new berthing structures, a new retail building, reconfiguration of the exit road and a possible relocation of the toll booths to allow larger holding compounds.

Horel project moves ahead; Norton stalled

By GAIL SJUBERG Staff Writer

Technical planning considerations collided with the will of the Salt Spring Local Trust Committee (LTC) last week when two community housing proposals were reviewed at the public LTC meeting

While not uniform in their rationale, trustees Eric Booth and Kimberly Lineger disagreed with Trust staff recommendations on both an eight-lot Horel Road strata subdivision proposal and a 26-lot plan put forth for Norton Road. Instead, they referred the projects to various advisory committees for recommendations.

They also directed staff to Windsor Plywood 537-5564 draft a bylaw for the rezoning and official community plan (OCP) amendments required for the Horel Road

"I have difficulty with the OCP policy that affordable housing should be in only island villages," said Booth, referring to the Horel Road site. "We are in crisis mode and I'm prepared to move this forward."

A Trust staff report suggested the Horel Road application by the Salt Spring Community Housing and Land Trust Society (SSCHLTS) should be refused, mainly because it contravenes official community plan (OCP) provisions on affordable housing criteria and by increasing density in the Cusheon watershed.

A report on the Norton Road application recommended reducing the project to a 15-lot subdivision, using a formula that creates a minimum average .74-acre lot size, with no lots smaller than .25 of an acre.

But planning consultant Tom O'Connor, who is handling the project for property owners Norm and Diane Elliott, said the project didn't make financial sense at the lower density level.

"If we are going to have to cut our density by 50 per cent, this ain't going to fly," he said. "You can't do affordable housing on threequarter-acre lots."

Trustee Booth said he agreed with O'Connor.

"If we go down the road less than a quarter mile away, Brinkworthy is double the density of what is being proposed. The magnitude of the issue of community housing on this island is yet to be understood by the community. I think this does have to be looked at in a different light."

Lineger said she was not comfortable with the 26-density level of the Norton Road project at this point and felt she needed more information.

She also applied similar caution to consideration of the Horel Road project and suggested the LTC's brand new housing and environmental advisory committees examine the proposal.

"Do we even consider doing something in the watershed zone?" she asked. "What is going to be the definitive impact on the watershed? I think we need to have that discussion."

The Horel Road proposal by the SSCHLTS would see eight small homes (750-square-foot average) constructed on .25-acre lots in a bareland strata subdivision on the five-acre property recently purchased by the housing society. Most of the land is zoned Rural Watershed 1, with the southern extremity in the Rural zone.

According to SSCHLTS member Melva Geldreich, who made a presentation to the LTC, six specialists have looked at the property and determined it could be serviced and the buildings constructed with little impact on Cusheon Lake water quality.

"People can live responsibly in watersheds," said Booth. "I think this [housing] society has demonstrated a commitment to living responsibly in the watershed."

Trustees also rejected pleas from opponents wanting the projects abandoned.

Wayne Hewitt, Tom Volquardsen and Peter Levitt addressed the LTC about the Horel Road project, insisting the watershed zoning and integrity be respected. Hewitt pointed out that the recently completed draft Cusheon Watershed Management Plan "found that even more land should have been zoned Watershed [in the area.]"

The Beddis Waterworks District, Cusheon Lake Stewardship Committee, Water Preservation Society and Waterbird Watch Collective have already gone on record opposing the project.

In answer to questions about why the watershed property was chosen and purchased before it could be rezoned, Geldreich said the housing society had searched in vain for two years for suitable and affordable property near Ganges, and that the current real estate market meant a quick decision was required.

"If we don't do something soon about affordable housing, then I don't know when and I don't know where," she said.

Essig plans MLA run, defends Trust staff

David Essig is giving up his long-held position as Islands Trust Council chair, but isn't abandoning political aspirations.

He said last week that he intends to run for the NDP nomination in the Cowichan-Ladysmith riding in preparation for the provincial election in May 2005.

Essig said one reason he was making the move was to hopefully raise the profile of the Islands Trust with the provincial government.

The riding is currently held by Minister of Labour

Graham Bruce.

Essig has been an islands trustee for a decade and has chaired both Islands Trust Council and the Salt Spring Local Trust Committee (LTC) for the past seven and a half years.

Even if he does not become an MLA, Essig said he will not be running for the Trust in 2005.

At last week's LTC meeting, Essig addressed recent allegations that he is "an outsider" making decisions for Salt Spring, and criticism that Trust staff are "city planners" who do not uphold the preserve and protect mandate through their handling of some applications.

"I would like to defend our staff," he said. "They are not pro-development. They are trained professionals; they have our communities' values at heart; and they live here."

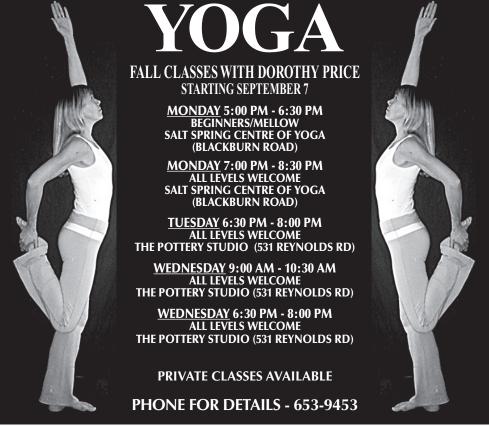

"I'd like to put to bed the notion that we are being led around by the nose by a bunch of guys from the city."

On the "outsider" issue, Essig pointed out how long he had been Salt Spring LTC chair, and noted he could have appointed one of three other Trust Executive Committee members to the position but felt it was important for continuity that he remain in the Salt Spring post.

"I'm either a masochist, or I care about your community," he said.

Also at the meeting, regional planning manager John Gauld made a brief presentation outlining the Trust decision-making process. A copy is available through the Ganges Trust office.

First day of classes will see rally opposing four-day school week

Islanders will greet the first day of school with a public demonstration opposed to a new four-day calendar during a rally at the Gulf Islands School District office Tuesday.

"The first day of school is a good day to make that stand, not the last day of school," said local parent Mona Fertig.

Fertig is a spokesperson for the island-based group called Keep Five Alive, which is opposed to the four-day calendar plan. She urges islanders to make a showing at the board office on 3 p.m. Tuesday.

"Bring your signs," Fertig said.

The rally will serve as a prelude to a forum focussed on the possible impacts of the four-day school week to be held from 7-9 p.m. at Gulf Islands Secondary School (GISS) on Monday, September 13.

The question-and-answer style forum will feature CUPE B.C. president Barry O'Neill, B.C. Teachers' Federation (BCTF) president Jinny Sims, former Gulf Islands school trustee Garth Hendren and Islands Trust/Parents Advisory Council representative Kimberly Lineger.

"It's going to be a consciousness-raising [event] for many people," said Fertig.

She believes it's significant that O'Neill and Sims will appear at the September 13 public forum.

"CUPE workers are the most affected by these cuts. They lose up to 20 per cent of their income. They are the bus drivers and custodians and they are the ones most affected within the system because the teachers still have their salaries."

Sims will provide a teacher's perspective to the four-day week, Fertig said.

"It's important because they do not support the fourday school week and the BCTF wants teachers to not be afraid to speak out about

Downsized Isabella density plan floated at Trust meeting

A density transfer proposal dropped two months ago by the Salt Spring Local Trust Committee will be investigated in a revised form.

Applicants have submitted a proposal that would see two densities - rather than the originally suggested four — transferred from a Sansum Narrows property to a 16.3-acre parcel at the corner of Isabella Point and Maxham roads.

"I see this as a compromise," said trustee Kimberly Lineger, who had voted against the four-density proposal.

The new plan puts two lots of approximately three acres in size on the east portion of the Isabella Point land, with some 45 per cent of the property covenanted to protect its ecological features.

At the August 25 LTC meeting, Lineger said the applicants had now done their "homework" with an environmental impact assessment completed by Madrone Environmental Services Ltd.

Brent Taylor of Polaris Consulting Ltd. also told the LTC that a minimum 15metre buffer would be maintained between the Isabella property and the adjoining Mount Tuam Ecological Reserve.

Some members of the public questioned the Trust's own procedures, which state an application must be substantially different before being reconsidered within one year's time.

Lineger agreed with the Trust staff position that it was a different-enough pro-

She suggested the concept be referred to the LTC's newly formed environmental advisory committee for review.

Trustee Eric Booth had been in favour of the original, four-lot transfer.

Vacation rental enforcement remains suspended for 2004

By GAIL SJUBERG Staff Writer

Salt Spring vacation rental businesses will be finishing the 2004 tourist season in peace, the Islands Trust confirmed last week.

Trustees Kimberly Lineger and Eric Booth agreed the bylaw enforcement moratorium should remain in place until all accommodationsrelated issues initiated by the Salt Spring Local Trust Committee last year were resolved.

"I know we've made it clear on the direction we're going," said Lineger at the August 25 LTC meeting, "but bylaw enforcement may interfere with the public hearing process."

Proposed changes to Salt Spring's official community plan and land use bylaw affecting island accommodations — both long and shortterm — will be the subject of draft bylaws and public hearings this fall.

As Lineger explained, trustees must be open to hearing all public input and be prepared to amend draft bylaws as a result. Trustees "might be perceived as fettering our discretion" if the Trust is actively pursuing bylaw compliance on some subject properties.

A year ago the LTC resolved to suspend bylaw enforcement against properties being illegally used for short-term vacation rental purposes, pending a broad review of accommodation

"I agree with Kimberly that the July 25, 2003 resolution should stand until we've gone through the whole review," said Booth.

Arlene Dashwood, representing the Association of Short Term Accommodations Rentals group, spoke at the August 25 meeting in favour of suspending enforcement against vacation rental homes until the tourist season was finished.

"I would ask that good sense and common sense prevail on this," she said. "We have bookings with our guests and we need time to fulfill the commitments."

She also criticized LTC chair David Essig for voting against stand-alone vacation rentals and making a decision that impacts islanders' livelihoods when he does not live on Salt Spring, and for listening to the same "naysayers" at monthly LTC meetings.

"A vocal minority has spoken, not the community as a whole," said Dashwood.

She cited the Salt Spring Island Conservancy as an example.

"I think the conservancy is misleading the public and it's making statements on vacation rentals instead of the ecology."

In recent interviews with the Driftwood, both trustees commented on their position regarding the July 30 LTC decision to not allow standalone vacation rental homes.

Booth was in favour of making the change to existing bylaws, while Lineger and Essig were not.

Booth said he felt Essig did not have the benefit of months of discussions at meetings with the vacation rentals resource subcommittee and Advisory Planning Commission to back up his

And Booth found inconsistencies in logic that could see 4,500 dwellings rented out for one period each year on an unregulated basis, versus allowing some 50 standalone homes to receive temporary use permits containing several conditions that would have to be met and maintained.

"This shouldn't be about 'who,'" said Booth, "it should be 'is this use going to have an impact and, if so, is there a way to minimize that impact?"

Lineger said turning down stand-alone vacation rental uses was "the hardest decision" she has made so far as a trustee.

Her mind was ultimately made up by a comparative examination of Salt Spring's home-based business land use regulations, which she described as "very permissive."

Land use in many neighbourhoods is not strictly for residential purposes, but the residential use predominates over the secondary business aspect, she explained.

'In every other case it's an accessory use to the home use," she said. "[Stand-alone vacation rental use] wasn't in step with the others.'

She also felt that property management and housekeeping companies could still end up with ample work if many property owners choose to rent out their residences for one period each year or use provisions allowing seasonal cottages to be rented as accommodation units.

"They are looking at what they have lost, not what they can gain," she said.

Lineger also said Salt Spring still has properties with commercial accommodation zoning that could be developed.

All proposed changes affecting accommodation and seasonal cottage regulations will be the subject of upcoming public hearings.

Abandon the fantasy

When it comes to discussing the potential filling of any part of Ganges Harbour, or what may or may not be developed on Ganges Marina property, somebody should take the old development permit and seawalk plans and throw them in the garbage or give them to the Salt Spring Historical Society.

What was envisioned or agreed to by government agencies 15 years ago should form no part of the decision-making process concerning the marina's ambitious new proposals in 2004.

Documents from 1989 represent a different era and are now irrelevant.

What is still relevant is the 1998 official community plan, which states the harbour should not be subject to infilling except for minor areas in order to complete the Ganges seawalk.

Salt Spring's OCP must clearly be amended if the harbour is to be filled for any other reason, which would presumably require some level of public approval before it occurred.

In the Ganges Marina proposal, seawalk completion is secondary to the company's desire to maximize the commercial potential of its tiny and awkward-to-develop property. Its offered waterfront park on the other undevelopable strips of land closer to the Upper and Lower Ganges roads intersection is in the same category.

A fully completed Ganges seawalk project was once deemed highly desirable — and would still undoubtedly be a harbour asset. But we've survived this long without the dreamed-of amenity and in order for a project like the seawalk to succeed, true selfless community-mindedness must take precedence over notions of profit or fairness.

Unfortunately, the real estate market on Salt Spring is such that we will only see more development proposals, undertaken more for the sake of boosting those properties' short-term re-sale prices than even their long-term profitability — or benefit for the island.

If we rely on companies such as B&B Ganges Marina to help finish the seawalk the way it was imagined in 1989, then we may as well start writing Chapter 2 of the Unfinished Ganges Seawalk Saga.

The completed part of the Ganges seawalk is great on its own. It's time to give up the fantasy about the rest of it and let the legend sleep.

Children: the latest endangered species on Salt Spring

By KATHY PAGE

A few months back, a friend called to ask whether my kids could pose for a photo to be published in the Driftwood.

"They're so cute," she said, "and people do just love a photo of kids. If they could possibly wear nice bright colours that would be best."

It was a good cause, and I knew the kids would enjoy doing it, so I agreed. However, as soon as I'd put the phone down I started to feel complicated about it.

It was only weeks since the school board had voted for the four-day school week. There were things I wanted to say to my friend, whose children are safely educated and happily grown up, but I felt I shouldn't. After all, she was quite innocently trying to do something for the community on Salt Spring and didn't deserve to be the recipient of my frustrations.

In the end, it is the wider community, not any individual, that I feel I need to address.

Let's think about this: every other week, the front page of the Driftwood carries a picture of kids: face-painted toddlers, teens and in-betweens peek out at us from between banks of flowers, emerge drenched from the sunstruck lake, play in the rain, make snowmen, perform in plays and so on. They are great pictures, and kids are indeed very good to look at — wonderful. Let's celebrate children.

But also let's remember that they are something of an endangered species on Salt Spring. School rolls here are dropping and this, in combination with years of cuts to the education budget, came to a head this May when our school trustees voted to bring in the four-day school week as a cost-saving measure.

Research on the four day week has been insufficient. People will try to make the best of it, but no one is seriously suggesting that it has any educational merit whatsoever. (If you have any doubt about this, go to www.keepfivealive.ca to read the excellent essay, Is Less Really More? by David Banks.)

I am one of those who would have liked the school board to take a different path, because it is clear to me that parents who feel passionate about education, as I do, will find this decision very hard to live with.

The more affluent among us are already, as mentioned in last week's Driftwood article, moving their kids to private schools on Vancouver Island where they can get full-time education.

The less well-off may well end up simply moving away. School rolls will shrink further, triggering further budgetary cuts. This is the situation that parents such as myself find themselves in.

It's a beautiful place, everything has to be weighed and balanced, but in the end, do we want to disadvantage our kids educationally at the price of living here? How much is bearable?

If you add to this latest blow the general difficulty, for many families, of making a living on the island and the lack of affordable housing, then perhaps you can see why I am thinking it may not be many years before Derrick Lundy has to go off island to snap those photographs everyone loves so much.

I don't think this is what Salt Spring wants. What I hope is that the entire community — not just parents and not just those suffering substandard lets or summer-kick-out rentals — will wake up and support those fighting for full-time education and affordable housing on Salt Spring. The vibrant and diverse community that brought us here in the first place is surely worth standing up for now.

Farmers Institute has no commercial axe to grind in harbour

By CHRIS SCHMAH

In response to inaccuracies outlined in a recent Driftwood letter to the editor, the directors of the Farmers Institute would like to set the record straight in regards to the institute's position on the B&B Ganges Marina proposal.

The proposal currently before the Islands Trust is requesting an amendment to the Salt Spring Island Official Community Plan (OCP), which would allow the development and filling of foreshore for commercial/residential mixed uses at the B&B Ganges Marina.

The Islands Farmers Institute is a volunteer organization of islanders and Salt Spring's leading advocate for the agricultural community, for the rural way of life and for some of the amenities that make Salt Spring a special place. It is one of the oldest not-for-profit societies on the island, and probably the oldest farmers institute in Western Canada.

The institute is responsible for the Fall Fair, one of the defining traditions of Salt Spring Island life. At no time has this institute opposed the OCP. In fact, the institute is on record as a participant in the development of the OCP and fully supports that document and the Islands Trust mandate to "preserve and protect."

On a very separate matter (as outlined in a recent letter to the editor), the institute did request changes to Land Use Bylaw 355 because of increased restrictions regarding farm building setbacks from waterways.

As a "small" neighbouring waterfront landowner to the B&B Ganges Marina, the institute has all the rights of a neighbour to review and analyze this application. With no commercial axe to grind, the institute will continue to provide comments on this and all other harbour development.

It has always been the intention of the institute to maintain its small harbourfront land for the public good, that is to protect public access to the waterfront, to preserve views of the waterfront and to encourage the completion of the boardwalk. The institute is opposed to any development that will undermine these long-term goals.

The current application from B&B Ganges Marina does in fact undermine these long-term goals. The approval would further privatize and clutter the harbour, which has already been subject to far too much fill and alienation. The harbour belongs to the people, and should not be allowed to become the private domain of a few entrepreneurs.

Although the current application will assist somewhat in the partial completion of the boardwalk, the institute does not feel that this minimal concession is enough to merit the further degradation of the harbour. The institute says that any application to develop these lands would have to provide for completion of the boardwalk.

On technical matters related to the proposal, the institute has sought legal counsel and did provide a copy to the trustees.

The legal opinion states that the 1989 development permit has fully expired under the Local Government Act and that the permit was never valid to authorize the filling of foreshore (only the federal government can authorize the destruction of fish habitat).

The initial permit by its own terms, did not authorize the type of project requested. With this in mind, planning staff of the Trust have recommended that the trustees amend the OCP in order to facilitate the approval of the B&B Ganges Marina proposal.

At the July Local Trust Committee meeting, trustees approved a motion to refine a development proposal to include a 16,297-square-foot, three-story building consisting of fourteen commercial accommodation units (time share) and five residential units plus other structures. All of which are to be located on an infilled foreshore, contrary to the OCP. The institute is opposed to any development plan that does not conform to the OCP.

The institute says the Trust has no obligation to say "yes" to the current applicant. You can say "no" many times, but you can say "yes" just once, and you will be stuck with the decision.

The writer is president of the Farmers Institute and the above piece was a combined effort written on behalf of the institute's board of directors.

Ask questions

If the high school is going to be open on the fifth day for international students and the performing arts school; if all the clerical staff will be there on the fifth day; and if there will be heating, lighting and programming on the fifth day, will there be any real savings in having the four-day school week?

Will the library and computer rooms be open? Will there be janitorial and first aid attendance? Will all students be allowed to use the facilities?

What is the real intention of freeing up the fifth day at schools for other activities? For school business company corporation growth?

Is two-tiered education getting its foot in the door at the expense of public education? Will some schools be using the fifth day for paid daycare? Paid education?

Why can't our children attend regular classes on the fifth day? Why will Outer Islands students suffer such long school days travelling back and forth in all kinds of weather?

Why were the Mayne Island and Salt Spring Isabella Point Road bus routes cut when buses are life lines for rural education?

All this re-organization for a projected deficit of $350,000 in 2004/05?

Did our school trustees mislead us about any savings the four-day week would bring? Did you know there are more cuts coming next year? What next?

If you have any questions about the lack of transparency and the inadequate public consultation in this school calendar change, or about the validity of the four-day school week academically, financially and for our community, come to the Public Demonstration Against Education Cuts, set for the first day of school on Tuesday, September 7, 3:30 p.m. in front of the school board office, and sign the petition around town or on our website www.keepfivealive.ca to restore the five-day school week.

The recent news that Channel Ridge Properties Ltd. is seeking to set aside the covenant limiting their development to 577 densities is alarming.

What an appalling situation! And what contempt for the process and the people of Salt Spring!

There continues to be many concerns about the current development in Channel Ridge, but at least there is a cap on the densities. Now, the developer wants more. Not satisfied with the original plan, the developer wants to set the density covenant aside.

This is not just something that affects the north end of the island. If this covenant is set aside for this developer, it establishes a precedent that puts all covenants at risk. There would be no control over developers on any part of Salt Spring Island.

The residents of Salt Spring rallied together several years ago to deal with the Texada threat. Now we must make the same concerted effort to deal with the Channel Ridge development threat.

Contacting the regulatory authorities who must deal with this application would be a good start. These are all listed in the article in last week's Driftwood. All of us must express our concern to these authorities and gain their support to defeat this specific application and continue to press the developer on the other contentious affect the so-sweetly-put "fabric of the island"?

Has our Islands Trust and provincial highways department looked the other way with the problems associated with this country lane? Our Norton Road is going to require enormous changes to accommodate all these new residents, and not just a simple widening of the road which fronts less than one-third of the new homes.

There are several problems with Norton Road, Scarff Lane, Kings Lane and Blain Road.

The slopes and blind curves already create problems. It is not unusual to slide into Upper Ganges Road on an icy day.

This is frightening also because there is another sizeable slope directly after the intersection at Norton that sends you down to Atkins Road.

By the nature of the slopes and bends near Atkins and Foxglove, you can barely see the tops of the cars flowing towards Ganges. If 26 or possibly twice as many more vehicles are all going to work at the same approximate time, this will be chaos.

If even half of these citizens go down and around Scarff Lane, they will still have to negotiate the other blind curve just near the bowling alley, and deal with the slope from Blain Road onto Upper Ganges Road (which houses the daycare and is the school bus stop).

Pedestrians, many of whom are seniors from the Brinkworthy and Norton areas, use these roads to access grocery shopping and medical appointments, as well as the seniors' centre, bowling alley, etc.

This huge increase in traffic is going to be dreadful for all of us — motorists and pedestrians alike. It is important to note that the school buses don't necessarily have to pick up our children as we are within the four-kilometre radius of Ganges schools.

Twenty-six more families equals a lot more children walking these heretofore ignored, potential traffic calamities.

Perhaps our heroic new housing development managers could provide our lucky neighbourhood with some very safe walking paths, separate from the existing narrow, sloping, blind and curved lanes they are about to annex.

Tough it out

Peter Vincent's columns seem to promote a certain amount of interest and controversy, depending on how one looks at the subject, and his latest one I felt needed another point of view.

I am a frequent traveller along the North End route he describes in his August 18 column, and in some ways I agree with him.

On most beautiful sunny warm days from the end of June to September, a large number of teenagers and families enjoy swimming or boating on St. Mary Lake, even if it is our drinking water.

They gather along the shoreline near the road because it is the easiest and most pleasant place to enter the lake and there is a very small beach there.

The curves in the road are dangerous if taken too quickly at any time. It is particularly hazardous when the sun is filtering through the leaves of the trees and the young people are in the shadows and hard to see. However, most of the time, traffic and people look out for each other.

A barrier at certain locations would be a good idea.

I always breathe a sigh of relief when I have passed two dangerous spots on the way to town, mostly in the winter when frost or fog can be a problem.

Please, no big signs or police with radar guns. After all, summer will soon be over and students back in school. With care on both sides, let's tough it out 'til then.

NANCY HOLCROFT, Westcott Road

Traffic circle

As one of the many who negotiate Central intersection umpteen times a day, I sure agree that something needs to be done before we are very sorry.

Traffic is getting heavier coming from Vesuvius; the line up sometimes reaches down below Portlock Park when a ferry offloads. Most of these cars are turning right to head into town. They'll pull up beside those going straight through, blocking their vision. Patience is thinned, priming a sort of "road rage lite," which means we will make mistakes more easily.

It's not going to get any better, especially with the impending development on Channel Ridge and full ferries arriving with commuters.

I'm also convinced part of the problem is due to different interpretations of right of way at a two-way stop. I've been honked at while going straight through, making the opposite driver wait before turning left. I didn't mean to be rude, and looked up the rules just to be sure when I got home.

The intersection at Central must be changed to be made safe. Say "traffic lights" and bite your tongue. A four-way stop would help and seems the obvious answer, but I'd like to suggest that a traffic circle is in order here.

I "googled" traffic circle and found a goldmine of information on the Internet. Studies from all over the world show that they really do work. A drastic reduction of accidents, remarkable "traffic calming" effects and beautification of roadways were all reported with little disadvantages noted.

There are all kinds and sizes; some are as simple as just having a concrete planter in the middle of the intersection, with "yield to the right" signs. Everyone keeps to the right, yielding to those already in the circle.

It's past time something was done at Central. Please google "traffic circle", and see if you don't want one too, and while we're at it, the intersection by the Harbour House is also getting pretty annoying.

No help

Those behind the Norton Road housing project are not benefactors. They are wealthy people who desire more wealth and their means of doing this are age-old: exploit those with less. What they neglect to acknowledge is that having less money does not equal having less intelligence.

It has always seemed to me that regular people purchase homes for one of two reasons. One, they want a place that is theirs to put down roots. They don't want someone telling them whether or not they can plant a tree or add a room for a growing family. Well this certainly won't be an option with the Norton proposal.

The other reason people choose to buy a house is for investment purposes, so perhaps in the future they can sell, then afford to buy a more ideal home. Again the Norton project will not allow for this. Their profit will be kept to a minimum. Meanwhile, other islanders who purchased their property for a similar price just a few years ago are free to double their money.

So good luck finding islanders who will buy into this nonsense. Long-term islanders have a habit of being intelligent and creative. I suspect the majority of buyers will not be locals but newcomers escaping the cities. Hardly solving the housing problem, is it?

Add to this a lack of regard for the existing neighbourhood. Their land values will no doubt drop, which is unfortunate, as many will want to leave and will have little to start over with elsewhere. They'll want to leave for safety reasons. This was once a quiet country road, which will become heavy with traffic. The corner of Norton and Lower Ganges Road has never been safe and I fear it will become a nightmare.

Back to the residents, let's hope a few cops do buy there because it will likely end up being a low-rental subdivision with all the usual problems.

Who am I and why am I concerned? I am an island resident of 17 years who lived for eight years on Norton Road. I have an interest in a house which is still occupied by my sister, a hard-working single parent and a young nephew and niece whose well-being and safety is very important to me.

This project will not help Salt Spring's lower-income families or the Norton neighbourhood. The people behind it should be ashamed.

Toxic

Poison is poison.

Arsenic can kill you in moments at a dose of 150 parts per million. Or it can cause horrible damage to the body over many years at doses around 10,000 times less

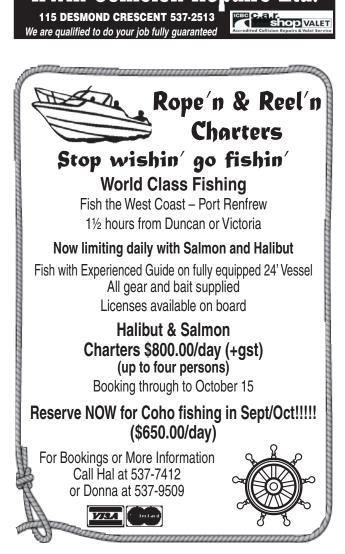

Cyanide, lead, mercury
— all the same. Radiation from uranium can fry you in an instant or, in tiny doses, cause cancer 20 years later.

We tend to think of North America as world leaders in everything. On this particular issue we're trailing badly. Even so, most people now know it's not a good idea to have a cell phone to your head for hours, or to live right under a cell tower.

Soon we're going to realize that this supposedly innocent "little" cell antenna isn't any better, and that microwave radiation too can be a lowlevel, long-term toxin.

Two-tiered education: a huge step backwards

By DAVID BANKS

For the growing number of parents and pupils concerned about the deteriorating state of public education in this province there is perhaps the lingering thought if anything has been learned from our history.

British Columbia followed the lead of Ontario and the inspirational work of educational reformer Egerton Ryerson in adopting B.C.'s Free School Act in 1872. With this legislation the seed of universal education in our province was planted.

The basic right to attend school was reinforced further with the B.C. Public School Act passed in 1892. British Columbia's first "free" school opened in present day Victoria, in March 1852, with 18 pupils and one teacher. The Hudson Bay Company then established several public schools on Vancouver Island in, or around, 1855. In 1873, African American John Craven Jones volunteered his time to establish Salt Spring's first public school, a clapboard one-room school house near the site where Salt Spring Cinema now sits. Our community owes Mr. Jones a great debt of gratitude because, at the time, rural schools were an exception.

With the rise and fall of World Wars I and II, universal education once again emerged as a public policy priority. In December 1948, influenced by the public sentiment of social activist Eleanor Roosevelt, a fledgling United Nations proclaimed education a universal human right.

Central to Roosevelt's inspirational work was her belief that access to affordable schooling was fundamental to the working of any democracy and that a faculty for critical thinking was fundamental to the preservation of a free and fair society. The same sentiment was articulated much earlier by renowned 19thcentury universal schooling advocate Horace Mann, who is famously quoted, saying, "Education . . . is the great equalizer of the conditions of men, the balance-wheel of the social machinery."

The serious deterioration of American public schools over the past few decades is possibly a testament to Eleanor's fears. But American public schools are not the only ones in decline. With continued funding cuts to public schools in this province, the closure of many rural schools and now the implementation of an American-inspired four-day school week in the Gulf Islands, we risk the same outcome.

Ted Sizer, former Dean of Education at Harvard University and, arguably, the most respected scholar in contemporary educational reform, has called the four-day week "a trend in the wrong direction" and a disgrace to the educational ideals of the richest country in the world. And Sizer is by no means alone in his view.

Ruy Teixeira, a Senior Fellow at the U.S.-based Century Foundation, who studies social, economic and political trends, recently commented "I haven't seen too many people say with a straight face that this [four-day week] produces superior academic performance . . . ."

Perhaps it is also telling that no urban school district in North America operates a four-day week. The trend is a purely rural one, tied very much to both problems of declining student enrollment and unique rural geographical features that impact operating budgets.

Changes to the B.C. government's education funding formula in March 2002 have significantly worsened the state of our rural schools. In adopting a four-day timetable, some parents are concerned that we may be unwittingly playing into the government's hand, and be creating a two-tiered educational system in the process — two-tiered in the sense that urban schools will keep a full five days of instruction and a full extra-curricular program while rural schools make sacrifices, and potentially unjust ones in the sense that access to quality education could become contingent on parents' ability to pay.

Some observers see the four-day week as a slippery slope towards market-based schooling. They point out, for example, that foreign students here, who each pay over $10,000 in annual tuition, will continue to receive five days of schooling.

The School District #64

Business Company administers our international student program. While the district defends this move by saying the new corporation was created for pragmatic accounting and administration purposes, this does, at the very least, create real problems of public perception. When asked by the Pender Island "Kids First" group whether the schools will be open five days a week for international students, secretary-treasurer Rod Scotvold replied, "At this point in time we anticipate that any school may be open for feepaying programs during the 5th day. The funds received from such programs will be utilized to offset additional operating costs."

Since the four-day week announcement was made, we also know that some independent schools on Vancouver Island, anticipating new recruits, are advertising here, and tinkering with bus schedules to meet Gulf Islands ferries. One private parochial school in Duncan has indicated it is prepared to change their school start time to accommodate students commuting from Salt

Our public school system has its problems as any institutionalized system does. But the alternative of two-tiered, user-pay schooling is socially and politically corrosive and a step backwards. Yet, public schools on paper are not enough. What is required is adequately funded, high-quality education available to all.

David Banks was schooled on Salt Spring, studied political philosophy at McGill University and completed his secondary school teacher training at the University of Cambridge.

Mountains

The latest Greenpeace ad in Alternative magazine stares down at me from my bulletin board: "It takes 90 years to grow a roll of toilet paper."

Every shopping day I gaze sorrowfully at the mountains of rolls of white toilet tissue in our local stores; then I reach for the small stack of toilet paper made from recycled paper and walk sadly to the check-out counter, my cloth shopping bags and or/baskets in hand.

Time to write another letter to the editor, I think. Time to have some bumper stickers made . . . perhaps of the older Greenpeace quote that has been on my wall for years: "Trees and plants are our only source of oxygen."

I keep on hoping that more people will vote with their shopping dollars, and the mountains of white toilet paper will shrink. Foxglove has been stocking recycled toilet paper for years.

All those colour display ads reminding us that next week is "Back to School" time make me wish I'd paid more attention in math class when I was back in school because maybe then I'd be able to figure out how the same island can have the most expensive waterfront property in the country and still be too broke to keep its schools open five days a week, or add up how many fractional owners it takes to make one neighbourhood, or multiply how many times you can sell the same property to how many people before you've sold out the island.

Economy

A diving economy could be the result of installing a cell antenna in the fire hall.

Studies show property value decreases of between two and 40 per cent when antennae are installed. I haven't found corresponding figures on business activity, but it doesn't require much of a stretch of imagination to think that there would be a similar negative effect.

I know, for sure, if this antenna goes in, I'll be spending no more time in Ganges than absolutely necessary. And I also know I'm not the only one. No more wandering around for casual purchases, coffees, gelatos.

No more groceries in Thrifty's. No more lunches in Calvin's.

"Ganges — the pretty little town where you can wander around all day within a couple of hundred feet of a cell antenna." Lovely image!

People are becoming more and more concerned about this topic, just as, at one time, they became more concerned about cigarette smoke, pesticides and many other such dangers. Imagine an airline that tried to fly in Canada these days, with a smoking section!

Can you say, "lightning-fast bankruptcy?"

I think the health of our children is the number one concern. But for anyone who isn't certain enough of the dangers to worry about that, do you want to risk your business too?

Rants to the person who stole the desk from outside Lions Hall on Thursday between 3-7. We are going to be watching for you. I was paying the Lions $50 for it, so thanks for taking money from one of our good community sponsors. How do you live with yourself? Sandy Robley.

ROSES

Roses to Rachel, Josh (small), Josh (large), and Dan from Tsawwassen and Ladner, and Dennis from the Need a Hand program. Their work saved a couple of back sufferers from risking more pain, and the team accomplished the task with excellent results. The experience was made even more pleasurable by the friendly and open attitude of the workers.

An ocean of roses to the fantastic group that made our Summer Ecological Exploration Program a success. Special thanks to all involved families for their support; to Johanna Hoskins, David Denning, Chris Arnett, Yvonne Adalian, Jim Raddysh, Donald Gunn and Briony Penn for sharing their talents, and to Thrifty's, GVM and the Rotary Club for their generous donations. Sea stars and pipefish, SEEP

Roses to the four youths who helped me clean my classroom as part of their volunteer service while on the island for church camp. It was a pleasure to spend the time with you, to peek into the window of your lives; and to experience your confidence, your conversation and your laughter. Thank you. Kim.

Roses and a big thank you to Fiona at Ganges Stationery. What a relief to have my driver's licence and bank card returned. Thanks, too, to both you and Yvonne for your friendly attitude and great service each time we're in your shop. You are just great! DO.

Roses to the SPCA staff for their wonderful treatment of my ancient cat "Smokey" during his recent "vacation."

Roses to Caroline at the provincial government office. This is a bit belated, but still heartfelt. Thank you for your patience and friendly help as I began the steps to establish our B&B business over a month ago. # Stop rescues

Some people aren't going to like this letter.

I read in the paper about all the deserted seal pups --180 being found by people, 40 per cent more than last year, and that they are seriously underweight and mal-

More than a decade ago I was told by a biologist for this area that seals were becoming overpopulated, increasing by 12 per cent per year, and that was before seal pup rescue and return.

Surely it is unreasonable and cruel to return these animals to an environment that is unable to feed them. Natural predation by orcas is no longer sufficient to control their population, and people no longer kill seals. Their traditional diet of herring and hake is seriously depleted. Many of the eelgrass meadows and kelp beds have been damaged or destroyed and with them the fish are gone that used to feed, shelter and reproduce there.

Seals now eat anything they can catch, including shiner perch around the wharves — a poor substitute for oil-rich herring. And so they put many other fish at

This year I found a young seal that had hauled out and died on the beach near my home. Its eyes were pecked out by the birds.

Another larger seal floated past, so bloated with gas that it couldn't dive. It was blind, its eyes swollen the size of golf balls and bulged out of their sockets. I wished I could put the poor animal out of its misery, but it was swept away by a strong rising tide to die somewhere

Unfortunately, baby seals have silvery fur and big appealing eyes, so people are moved to save them and the wildlife rescue people do their best to care for, feed and medicate if necessary all the creatures brought to

So what is the solution? Nature is trying to get the seal population back in balance. In nature, nothing is wasted. The dead animals provide food for eagles, vultures, raccoons, gulls and, in the sea, shrimp, crabs and many other members of the food web that feed fish that may later be food for the People have learned to stop "rescuing" deer fawns. I hope they can learn also to stop "rescuing" seal pups deserted by their starving mothers, reviving them and putting them back into the

To truly help the seals, the long-term solution would be to enhance the fish population. Most important of these is herring. We could replace the herring roe fishery with the native method of getting the herring to spawn on kelp, some of which can be harvested and the rest of the eggs left to renew the population. Herring don't die when they spawn, they live to spawn again, or at least be food, not only for seals, but for cod, halibut, salmon, etc., that we like to eat.

The big kelp beds I remember when I was growing up here are gone, but we could grow kelp, as they do in Japan. It would reduce the nutrient overload, provide a usable resource and provide shelter for fish and other marine life as it grows.

We need to learn from nature and work with it to restore the health and life of this precious ocean we share, for the sake not only of seals but for our own sake as well and all the creatures that call it home.

Trust researchers

The fact that the Salt Spring Island Fire Protection District trustees have entered into a $1,000-a-year contract with Telus to install an antenna on the clock tower is not a done deal.

If a majority of the population of Salt Spring is opposed to this, the contract can be cancelled.

The health of everybody living and working within a kilometre of the tower will be affected. Let us remind ourselves that there are four schools within one kilometre of Ganges.

The fact that Sweden, one of the most progressive countries in the world and up to date on health issues, has issued warnings about the uses of cell phones and the situation of antennaes near inhabited areas should be enough for us to take notice. If that country's research warrants protection of its population, that research is good enough for me. They were the first to warn the world about the dangers of amalgam fillings, remem-

I don't want to be subjected to any more radiation, electromagnetic fields or waves of any kind than exist at the present moment. The health effects of all these things we can't see are cumulative and do make people sick all over the world.

In Germany and Sweden the governments are actually having to build new towns free of high electromagnetic fields, TV, radio and wireless communication antennaes because they have recognized that an important percentage of their population have become highly sensitive to any kind of exposure to such current, waves, radiation and wireless signals.

Their healthcare systems are actually compensating these people who cannot work because of this condition. Also, as some people only understand the language of money, the value of properties known to be in the danger zone would greatly go down.

Salt Spring residents could decide to shop outside of downtown, farther away from the tower, for groceries for example, or not hang out in coffee shops, restaurants or browse in bookstores

. . or go to the market and generally spending as short a time in town as possible.

This idea should greatly shake up our merchants who should be against the antenna anyway because these very merchants are in town all day, every day.

The school board should also be against this antenna because parents could, maybe, go after them legally for not preventing the school population from exposure to a known danger in the proximity of the schools.

Do the residents of Channel Ridge know that they are subjected daily to the effects of the cell tower situated on Canvasback Road?

Let's face it, if this tower was a smelter or pesticides factory, there's no way it would find its way into Ganges, let alone Salt Spring!

Because we don't see electric waves it doesn't mean they are not there affecting our health.

Just ask the parents of children who died of brain tumors caused by electromagnetic fields (research all over the world proves this) if they would fight the installations of these towers if they had known.

We have the advantage of knowing. I trust all the researchers who have proven it is dangerous for everybody to be exposed.

Trustees should stick to OCP when it comes to Ganges Harbour

The following is a presentation made to the Salt Spring Local Trust Committee at its August 25 meeting.

By JOHN WOODWARD

I speak for a group of concerned citizens. We begin by saying that the proposed marina development is not in keeping with the Preserve and Protect mandate of the Islands Trust.

Infilling of our harbour is a violation of our official

You, our trustees, were elected by the public and we expect you to uphold our OCP and be the guardians of our precious island and what's left of our natural har-

In 1996 and 1997, many islanders, including myself, all volunteers, gave freely of our time assisting the Trust in developing a new OCP. Why did we do this? We did it to get the island we want.

That was the official theme.

The new OCP, officially adopted in June 1998 and approved by the public, contains a Shoreline Zone which provides for no infilling of the harbour except minor areas to complete the board-

Your July 28, 2004 resolution requesting refined plans for a major landfill of the harbour to facilitate a private development runs contrary to the OCP and is not within your preserve and protect mandate. We object to the Marina proposal.

These are our reasons:

1. You seem to be relying on a 15-year-old permit to a previous owner, which by its own terms lapsed 14 years ago. This permit was only for building a portion of the boardwalk, requiring some minor fill. It was never the intent of the former Trustees that buildings be placed on the filled area. Clearly, the permit states "placement of fill is to be levelled and seeded with rye grass and clover."

2. Eight years later, because there had been too much infilling of the harbour, the Trust adopted the new O.C.P., with the clear intention to prevent future infilling.

3. The marina proposal requires at least two changes to our OCP, plus rezoning, to which we object.

4. Also, in your resolution of July 28, you've instructed staff to prepare preliminary amendments to our OCP and Land Use Bylaws to accommodate this scheme.

Where is the Preserve and Protect mandate by allowing the infilling of our harbour? If this scheme proceeds with landfill, other developers will justifiably want the same opportunity.

Aside from the group I speak for, two other groups strongly object to harbour infilling. The Salt Spring Conservancy and the Islands Farmers Institute are both opposed to amending our OCP to favour private development requiring infill of the foreshore. These two "not-for profit" organizations have hundreds of members. You should listen to them.

There is little or no benefit to the public in this proposal. The boardwalk will still not be completed or connected to Rotary Park. Our Parks and Recreation Commission does not want a park dedication on Lots 1 and what will be left of Lot 2.

The public is already protected from any development of these tiny lots because of the setbacks from the ocean and road. They are unbuildable lots and are already protected from development under our present OCP.

To sum up, we say to you, our servants and elected trustees:

1. Stick to our present OCP, which many of us volunteered and worked so hard for in order to get the island

2. We expect you, as servants of the electorate, to make decisions within the preserve and protect mandate and uphold our OCP and bylaws.

3. We ask you to rescind the resolution and to stop the planning process requiring harbour infilling. Let the developer resubmit a plan that conforms to our present OCP and bylaws.

In reference to the August 18 "Bring on the four-way stop" editorial, having travelled extensively throughout South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and England, we have often wondered why Canada hasn't adopted the sensible and effective traffic control of round abouts. This would eliminate stop signs altogether, keeping the traffic moving when no one else is in the circle.

It is so simple. There's no need for electricity. There's one rule for right of way and no second-guessing, and, because it is a circle, there will be no problem with seeing other traffic coming from any direction.

There are two locations that would be ideal for round abouts: Central, and Upper and Lower Ganges road intersections. The centre of the round about would be lovely planted with flowers and shrubs

And finally, if people drift through two stop signs and cause chaos, imagine the chaos when people drift through four stop signs.

WATER.

OUR MOST PRECIOUS RESOURCE AND WHY YOU SHOULD BE CONCERNED.

Development on Salt Spring Island is occurring at an extremely rapid rate, especially within the North Salt Spring Water Works District.

The total amount of water available is approximately 225 million gallons per year. Overall water demand in the District has reached 150 million gallons per year, and is currently increasing by about 4.75 million gallons per year.

The present community plan and its resultant bylaws permit a future level of development that could increase water demand by 50 %.

Our analysis of the Aqion Report Came to four major conclusions:

- 1. The Aqion Report seriously underestimated the potential demand from Single Family Dwellings. The Aqion Report calculated demand on the basis of 45,294 gallons per year. The actual amount is 57,000 gallons per year.
- 2. The report seriously overestimated groundwater as an additional water source.
- 3. No consideration was given to climactic factors in the hydrological calculation.
- 4. No safety reserve was given for demand beyond 2020, and no water reserve set aside for future generations.
- 5. The Aqion Report suggested the NSSWD could continue to accept more development in addition to that already permitted in the Community Plan and its bylaws. We strongly disagree with this conclusion.

The Aqion Report

A report was completed in July 2003 by Aqion Water Technologies Ltd. for the Islands Trust, with funding from the Provincial Government. Its purpose was to provide a water supply and demand analysis for the area within the North Salt Spring Waterworks District (NSSWD).

Projections of water demand were made to the year 2020. This report has been approved be the NSSWD and the Islands Trust.

What you can do...

- 1. Learn more about this important issue. Pick up a copy of Michael Larmour's critique of the Aqion Report at Salt Spring Books.
- Contact the Islands Trust and ask them not to use the Aqion Report as a planning tool for approving more development, to ensure that we do not exceed the practical limitations of water supply.
- 3. Ask the Islands Trust to fund a thorough scientific analysis of Salt Spring Island's water resources involving the many disciplines that are a necessary part of that process.
- 4. Contact the NSSWD and voice your concerns.
- 5. Protect our watersheds. Ask our trustees NOT to approve re-zoning of any watershed lands for development.

Chatting with artists, writers, performers some highlights of summer reporting life

By JENNIFER MCFEE Staff Writer

Instead of sitting at my desk answering phone calls and scribbling furiously, today I'm throwing my bike and backpack into my little white car and driving off to Fulford Harbour.

Sometime today, I'll be on the ferry heading back to Victoria, where I have lots of unpacking to do to prepare for my final year of university.

I thrive on change, it's true, but I'll really miss being on Salt Spring.

Since I graduated from high school 10 years ago, I have led a transient life and could never seem to sit still. But this summer, I was surprised to find a place that made me want to stay. I have felt more at home on Salt Spring than I have felt anywhere else for a long time.

Once I'm back in my city routine, I know I'll miss being surrounded by Salt Spring's natural environment. In the past few months, I've enjoyed many memorable swims in the lakes and ocean that rekindled my passion for aquatic activity. I became instantly enraptured with the trees on this island, and by the fact that I could actually see the stars at night.

Working as the Driftwood's student reporter was a great experience because it allowed me to become involved and in tune with the heartbeat of this community. I spoke to people from every corner of the island, and I feel privileged that they shared their stories with me.

JOB WELL DONE: Driftwood summer student Jennifer McFee is off to new adventures as her work term finishes this week.

I think my favourite tasks were the ones that allowed me to chat with artists, writers and performers about their inspirations

Shooting the late-night shift for the Day in the Life photography project was another unforgettable assignment. I started cruising the island at 9:30 p.m. and didn't get home until nearly 5 a.m. I got to hang out behind the scenes at local pubs and restaurants, Long Harbour ferry terminal, the hospital and the RCMP station. The ridealong in the cop car was especially interesting.

Through all of my island interactions, I discovered new interests of my own. I came to this job with a preference for news writing, but soon found out I enjoy profiles, reviews and photography, not to mention after-work activities of weight training, pilates and skinny dipping.

Well, 'bye for now, Salt Spring. Thanks for making me feel welcome in your community for the past four months. I'm sure I'll be back.

Cart-nappers deserve parking lot punishment

I generally do the grocery shopping for the family. Call me crazy, but I rather enjoy it

I have a list, of course, (not made out by me, of course), which makes it easier, plus I get a kick out of bumping into friends for a chat.

But there is one unfortunate facet of the experience that is never far from my mind: the HABITUAL SHOPPING CART THIEF. I am ever on the lookout for one: I want to nab him or her in the act of committing this heinous crime.

My eye is always peeled, my glance fully cocked; I'm waiting to zoom in on the boob who unloads the cart — a cart generously loaned by the store's management

— gives it a shove or a kick and speeds away chortling gleefully.

I regularly rehearse what I would say to this cartnapper. If I'm in a good mood, it might be: "Excuse me, sir (or madam); I wonder if you would mind taking your cart back from whence it came."

At other times it could well be: "Hey, buster, why don'tcha take it back where ya got it!"

But all in vain. I have never yet, after years and years of waiting and practising, and even on occasion stalking, been successful in my quest.

Why? Who does this? Who, without a thought for anybody else, just dumps a cart in the middle of the parking lot, perhaps taking up a whole parking space, perhaps ready to roll down and leave a dent somewhere?

"Oh, well," I hear them think, "they have these boys who come out and get them."

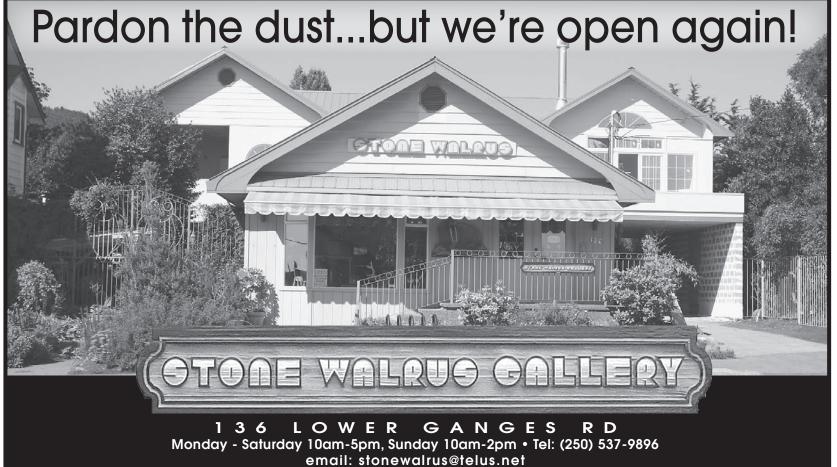

Oh yeah? But who pays for the boys? We do! With the barbecued chickens that just went up a buck!

Come on, people; the store is nice enough to be nice to us, to help us get the stuff to the car. At least we can have the courtesy to be nice to them and to other shoppers who can't find a place to park because your idiot cart is in the way.

"Let the punishment fit the crime," intones the Lord High Executioner in The Mikado opera. Ah, so!

The sentence: 30 days in the parking lot, rounding up loose carts, nesting them up and pushing an immense line of them down the middle of the High street! Plus: no shopping cart use for six months!

So watch out for me. I'm the guy in the corner with the binoculars.

Galiano films on response to four-day school week released

Two five-minute films featuring Galiano residents' responses to the Gulf Islands School Board decision on the four-day school week are available for viewing.

The videos were produced at the Gulf Islands Film and Television School (GIFTS) as part of an adult documentary intensive course in June.

Salt Spring resident Tanya Lester worked on every aspect of the film project, along with Victoria resident Heather Clarry, Arye Micheal Berlet of Galiano and Justin Cousineau from Vancouver. The films were cut and edited from two hours of interviews with a high school student, a school trustee, parents and a teacher at various Galiano locations during the week-long course.

Island students battle back-to-school stress

By JENNIFER MCFEE Staff Writer

Emotions of excitement and anxiety emerge as Salt Spring students prepare to bid summer holidays goodbye and get back to the books on September 7 for the first day of school.

"I think it's just like anybody returning from a holiday getting back into the swing of things. Summer is generally a healthy time for people. They come back after having camped and had family time," said Salt Spring Island Middle School counsellor Tiffany Wightman.

While most kids are excited to see their friends again, many dread the work associated with the upcoming school year, she added.

"Kids get stressed out. They're totally afraid of homework. There's a lot of pressure academically," she said.

Students also worry about fitting in with the right clothes and supplies, which can be a financial problem for some families.

"We have such a range of people on this island. Some have so much money, some don't have any," Wightman Parents can help ease back-to-school anxieties by getting kids involved in reading enjoyable books before classes begin, Wightman suggested. She also recommended that kids set academic and social goals for the school year.

"Kids just need to remember who they are, make goals and recognize what's important to them," she said.

Jamie Alexander, a school-based youth and family counsellor, said that kids who are changing schools face additional stresses.

"Anxiety is not being able to paint a clear picture of what the future will be like. The elementary and middle schools do as much as they can to pave the road for them," said Alexander, noting that the Family Place school supplies drive is a wonderful way to ease additional stress for some families.

"The best thing parents can do is have clear lines of communication with the new school and to develop a relationship with the teachers early in the year. I think that's a really helpful thing to do because worry is contagious."

Because parents are worrying about changes to the school week, kids are picking up on this unease, Alexander added.

"There's a lot of anxiety in the district about the four-day school week. A lot of parents are worried about it and kids tend to take on the worries their parents have. Kids are more flexible than adults. It's harder for adults to make changes."

Despite the stress associated with change, school is still a main social venue and kids anticipate reunions with their classmates.

"I think the cliché is true that the younger kids are more ready to go back to school when the time comes. Back-to-school jitters often evaporate once school starts," said Alexander, who works mostly with elementary and middle school students.

Peer pressure and bullying are stresses kids face throughout the year, and Alexander recommended that kids forge bonds with friends and school staff to alleviate these problems.

"A kid who is not connected to others has less defence against these things," he said.

Alexander pointed out that teachers, along with parents and students, face stress each September when school starts.

"One of our greatest miracles every year is how fresh the teachers are when they come back. The younger kids especially absorb that. They really are miracle-workers," he said

The Province of British Columbia is adding 25,000 new post-secondary spaces by 2010. These new spaces will increase access to university, college, and trades training for British Columbians of all ages. This will give students more options closer to home, saving them thousands of dollars each year. From one corner to the other, every region of the Province will benefit. Our post-secondary schools have always been a source of pride. And now they're even better.

'Nasty' Money Maker Reef claims another boat victim

Reefs and rocks took their toll on island boats as Ganges-based Canadian Coast Guard crews assisted two boaters who had run aground over the weekend.

"Good old Money Maker Reef claimed another victim," said coast guard crewman Roland Temmel.

A 34-foot power vessel hit the local reef at 8:45 a.m. on Saturday. The rudder post was jammed up into the hull and the pumps couldn't keep up with the leak, Temmel said.

Coast guard crews aboard the Skua assisted the sinking boat with pumps until a commercial vessel towed the boat back to Ganges.

Money Maker Reef is located in Ganges Harbour at the northwest tip of Third Sister Island, he said.

"There's a lot of nastiness in there.'

Coast guard crews could offer little comfort to a second boater who struck a rock or reef just northwest of Tumbo Island (near Saturna) at 12:45 p.m. on Friday.

"We went to help but he floated off on his own."

A 56-foot pleasure boat likely suffered damage to a propeller shaft and the transmission when it ran aground, Temmel said.

Though the boat's pumps were able to keep up with leaks and it still had a functioning engine, the boat was towed by a commercial vessel to a port for repairs.

In other coast guard news:

 A boater with chest pains was taken to Victoria General Hospital from Reef Harbour, on the west side of Tumbo Island, when he fell ill on August 19.

 Skua crews recovered and repositioned a navigational buoy after it was snagged by a towed log barge on August 20. The crew of the offending tugboat notified the coast guard when they noticed they had hooked the Musgrave Rock buoy.

Brownie leaders sought, Girl Guides registration is just around the corner

Girl Guides is alive and well on Salt Spring Island as the local group gears up for another year of fun and challenges.

Registration is set for Wednesday, September 15 at Community Gospel Chapel from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Girl Guides of Canada offers programs for girls between the ages of five and 18, starting with Sparks (ages 5 and 6, kindergarten to Grade 1); Brownies (ages 7 to 9. Grades 2 and 3); Guides (ages nine to 12, Grade 4 to 7); and Pathfinders (ages 12 to 15).

Seeds of hope planted by eco-friendly group

A non-profit Salt Spring society is rekindling its hope for the right piece of land to house its lofty goals.

The Heavenly Order of Peace on Earth (HOPE) Society is a non-profit humanitarian, peace and social justice organization incorporated in 2000, following its conception in 1987.

Long-time island resident Izadaura Godchild is the society's vice-president, executive director and projects manager.

As Godchild explains, the society's aims are to:

· support and develop sustainable eco-friendly land use and healthy, productive lifestyles, including farming and artisan practices;

- to support and develop sustainable eco-friendly affordable housing communities;
- to support and promote humanitarianism, environmental protection, preservation and sustainability through the education of youth and adults;
- · raise spiritual and multicultural awareness through the education of youth and adults, and to help eradicate racism and promote global
- · support food banks and homeless shelters on a yearround basis.

Godchild said the group is seeking "humanitarian and socially conscious benevolent" investors to help buy property and boost the project overall.

"It's a rock-solid, winwin, job-creation, community development project for the greater good of our Salt Spring community," said Godchild.

In order to accomplish its aims, the HOPE Society has envisioned four incomeproducing sub-branches, involving film and book production, and creation of an affordable housing, "artisan" and farming commu-

Japanese, Salt Spring woodworking converges at ArtSpring exhibition

By JENNIFER MCFEE Staff Writer

Eastern and Western woodworking traditions will converge at ArtSpring next week for a two-day Works on Wood exhibit featuring pieces from local and visiting artists.

On September 8 and 9, the Salt Spring Island-Japan Exchange Association will host an exhibition focusing on woodturning and finishing techniques, with 20 Japanese artisans travelling over the ocean from the famed lacquerware-producing city of Yamanaka.

Event coordinator Gary Cherneff said the exhibit will showcase approximately 100 works from Japanese artists, plus pieces from about 15 local woodworkers.

"Our goal is to see how we can learn from each other and collaborate. That's basically where we are now. We're just thrilled that they're going to come here and do this," he said.

"We're hoping that artists of all types will be interested. A lot of painters and people into Japanese iconography will enjoy this show."

For the past eight years, Salt Spring and Yamanaka have been working on creating an arts exchange program that is beginning to take shape. Officials from Yamanaka approached Salt Spring artists to develop a cultural exchange between the two communities, which they hope to extend to include fine arts, written word, music and performance.

The international association brought a Japanese potter to Salt Spring last March, and in February of 2005, a group of local artists will travel to Yamanaka to learn about the community's cultural heritage.

"We decided it was really worthwhile pursuing," said Cherneff, a local potter. "It's an opportunity to exchange, to be challenged on both sides, and to really enter into this kind of relationship, particularly in the wood arts and wood crafts. We're all waiting to see how this goes."

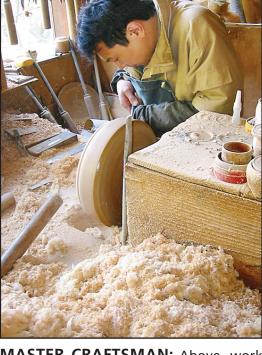

Along with local creations, the upcoming exhibit will showcase pieces of Yamana-ka lacquerware that range from utilitarian to highly decorative.

"This is a very, very old technique and it's still practised in a traditional sort of way. Yamanaka is the largest lacquerware producer in Japan and it's all done by hand," said Cherneff.

"What we term 'lacquer' in North America is quite a different thing than the idea of lacquer in Japan. In Japan, it's a natural tree product. It's refined from natural sources. It's not synthetic at all."

Local translator Rumiko Kanesaka noted another cultural difference between the Eastern and Western artisans. In Japan, craft is seen as an industry, while in Western countries, craft is seen as an art, she said.

"In Yamanaka, they first developed a woodturning technique and they invited mastercraftsmen from all over Japan to develop the industry further," said Kanesaka, explaining that the lacquerware process involves priming, coating and painting a wooden base.

"The group coming this time encompasses a really big age range from about 16 years old to established artists showing their work in high-end galleries," she said.

Cherneff added that most Yamanaka artists don't sell their work directly; rather, it is sold remotely through large stores.

"I think that's something new for them to sell right from their site. They're looking to Salt Spring as a bit of a model to start that kind of thing," said Cherneff, who is helping to organize a studio tour for the visiting artists.

"This project involves the evolution of getting deeper into the sensibility of what it is to be a craftsperson and be a part of that world. I really appreciate the chance to get to know another culture. The goal is to infect people with that same excitement. Having that different point of view is wonderful and is very energizing for artists."

The ArtSpring exhibition will run from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on September 8 and 9, with woodturning and painting demonstrations from 1:30 to 4:30. A Japanese tea ceremony will also be held on Wednesday, September 8 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

opening on Friday September 3 from 7 to 9 p.m., the membership was challenged to provide up to three of their best new works for display.

With 33 artists presenting in various media and styles, you might be inspired to pick up a brush yourself.

Bernice Wood's two oil paintings of rural scenes use a gorgeous sense of colour with rich indigos and vibrant oranges highlighting the composition.

Her portrait of Murray Shoolbraid shows a fine understanding of portraiture and captures the essence of the man.

Two pencil-sketched portraits by Josie Campbell use seniors to great effect, telling their stories with the wrinkles on their faces.

Some of the work should be seen from a distance. Sylvia Andrews' Abandoned Dreams and Forest Light, and Dennis O'Connor's Olympic Headland both are rather ordinary up close but from far away they are quite stunning representations.

ARTISTIC EYE: Island artist Don Hodgins works on a pencil sketch as he staffs a table at the Salt Spring Painters Guild show, which runs this week at ArtSpring.

The curators should keep this in mind when hanging the show.

Dierdre Tessman's three PEI Series are bold yet somewhat mysterious oils that use composition and colour to draw in the viewer. The work evokes nostalgic feelings of places been and people met.

Red Dirt Girl, painted from the perspective of the artist looking down at a pair of feet, resonates with the years before age and circumstance dictated that we wear shoes all the time.

Youth, freedom and sensuality (the feel of dirt between toes) remind the viewer that returning to that time is not only possible but also neces-

Margaret Threlfall's style is immediately recognizable with its flowing, almost cubist, patterns of nature. Her Cascade, a watercolour of a waterfall, is lovely.

The guild is holding its registration for the year on September 15 from 9 to noon at ArtSpring, for those who have been closet artists and want to break out, or for those who'd like to meet like-minded folks and gain access to classes.

Powerful Dogville brims with politics

As confrontational they come, Lars Von Trier's Dogville is an emotionally powerful tale of revenge. It takes place in a Depression-era Colorado town named Dogville, where Grace (Nicole Kidman) arrives seeking shelter from yet intellectually complex

sters. She is befriended by the town, but quickly learns that their hospitality has a price.

The townsfolk, realizing that both the law and local mob-

Grace's situation is precarious, begin to take advantage of her. Little do they know just how resilient — and calculating — this seemingly

Dogville, much to the chagrin of many viewers, is shot on a massive set much like that of a stageplay passive young woman might

There are no walls, as the town's buildings are represented by lines painted on the floor. There are some props, but many things are simply drawn on the ground (including a dog). Meanwhile, sounds have been added. The character fakes opening a door, we hear a click, a creak, then a slam.

As always, Von Trier (Breaking the Waves, Dancer in the Dark) wants to bypass Hollywood's traditional focus on sets, costumes, and scenery, instead focussing on more important elements such as acting and writing.

The result? Dogville is an experience much like that of another Danish film, Thomas Vinterberg's The Celebra-

Initially you are distracted by the awkwardness of the set, and probably more than a little bored with what seems to be a pokey plot.

But by the halfway mark, as you sense the emotional energy charging through the storyline, it becomes impossible to turn away. By the time of the climax, it feels like the fate of the world may indeed rest on Grace's shoulders.

I think the power of the film relies on how it incorporates an absurd amount of political and social commentary, much of which is dangerously ambiguous.

It's no surprise that some American critics were strongly offended, as they (like myself) probably sense how Dogville the town might in fact stand for America itself.

And if so, the solutions provided for the moral quandaries that emerge at the end of the film might indicate that Von Trier is calling for some truly radical (i.e. violent and/or fascist) solu-

Island's first paint-in party runs Saturday

All artists and art lovers are reminded that this is the last week to sign up and get ready for Salt Spring's first outdoor "paint-in."

On Saturday, September 4, artists from Salt Spring, Vancouver Island and elsewhere will gather on and about the streets of Ganges to set up their easels and show their works.

Both groups and individuals artists will be painting harbour scenes and local characters.

"Come and join us and enjoy the weather, the scenery and the invigorating experience of mixing with the artists," states a press release for the event.

The paint-in starts at 10 a.m. and will run throughout the day until 4 p.m. Artists need to check in at ArtSpring at 9 a.m. before setting up, in order to get a package of materials.

For more information or to pre-register, contact Libby Jutras at 537-1952 or libby@saltspring.com.

Wild's book builds bridge between science, religion

By PAT BARCLAY

Special to the Driftwood Robert C. ("Bob") Wild is a retired Anglican priest, community activist, serious thinker and experienced writer with two deep and abiding concerns: the inequities and social injustices of so-called "civilization," and the decline of the Christian church in our time.

His new book, Sacred Presence: In Search of the New Story, is a remarkable achievement that succeeds in integrating these two concerns while pointing a practical way forward.

Why is it that "... contemporary church teaching is failing to engage the urgent religious questions of ordinary people?" asks Wild.

His answer is persuasive. The physical sciences have "revolutionized our perception of the cosmos," while the social sciences have shown us that "everything on Earth is inter-connected."

Therefore our consciousness today, so permeated by science, is a very long way from the world view of the ancient Hebrews and early Christians, who lived on a flat earth in the centre of the universe, under heaven above.

How, then, to make the heart of the ancient teachings vital again? To address and ultimately answer this huge question, Wild ranges over a vast field of information, supporting his own observations and conclusions with many others gleaned from his years of reading and study. He discusses:

• The "new cosmology" as the "necessary context" for our time;

• The legacy of ancient Israel, with her "social vision" and evolving image of her God;

• Jesus' understanding of God as "compassionate, vulnerable and generous," and his own commitment to "active loving;"

• The "dominant tradition in Christianity," which exalts Jesus as the Lamb of God, vs. the persistent "prophetic impulse in the church," which honours him as "servant prophet, healer and teacher;"

• How the "new cosmology" offers an opportunity for finding new ways of linking Christianity's mystical tradition, its consciousness of sacred presence, with renewed respect for our lifegiving Earth;

• Seeing the Earth as a gift from a generous God, which therefore requires us to live responsibly;

• An "Agenda for Christians," with suggestions for revising the language of worship and meaningful prayer.

To pull all of this together and what's more, to pull it off, is no mean feat!

Well aware that Sacred Presence: In Search of the New Story may be few people's idea of light reading, Wild has helpfully provided summaries of each chapter's main points, two important appendices and an extensive bibliography.

His book builds a sturdy bridge between science and religion that invites "new enquirers" as well as readers with Christian training to cross over into exciting new territory.

As for "conservative believers," Bob Wild has this message: "In view of the long history of our tradition, can we not trust the God of biblical faith to lead us to insights for new times . . .

.? Surely we can expect that the wisdom of past and present together can speak with vitality to the unfamiliar landscape which lies ahead."

Sacred Presence: In Search of the New Story is published by Trafford Books and available at Volume II and Salt Spring Books.

A light supper will be served after the workshop, where participants can meet with Wheeler in an informal gathering.

Workshop cost is $10 with registration at the church office (537-2171). Donations towards the meal will be gratefully accepted.

On Sunday evening, September 12 at 7:30 p.m., Wheeler will play what he calls "an audience-friendly" concert.

"His inimitable style and skill, which have earned him the reputation of being one of the world's greatest organists, is a great recipe for an enjoyable evening. Wheeler's creative energy is indefatigable and his performances have taken him all over the globe."

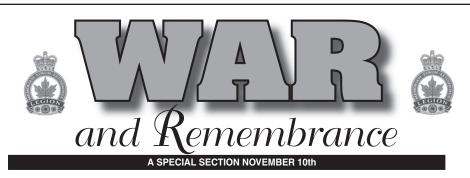

Wheeler was director of music at Christ Church Cathedral in Montreal for 31 years, and now lives in Maine where he recently retired from his director of music post at St. Francis-bythe-Sea Anglican Church in Blue Hill.

He has given organ recitals in England, including Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's Cathedral. He has appeared in every province in Canada and has played four times at Carnegie Hall with the Montreal Symphony Orchestra.

Even in retirement, he maintains a busy performance schedule. This summer has been no exception and his next concert after his brief stay on Salt Spring takes him to Ottawa for the St. Matthew's Festival.

Tickets for Sunday's concert are $12 ($8 for students), and are available at the church office (537-2171) from Monday to Friday, 9 a.m. to noon, and at Acoustic Planet (537-9668).

Jacquest back on stage at Vesuvius

Local musician Dave Jacquest returns to the Salt Spring stage Saturday night as the lead singer in the Softie and the Rock Hard Men band playing at Vesuvius Bar and Grill.

Jacquest, who may be remembered as the bass player for local rock band Pogo and the Carrot Revolution, received many scholarships when he graduated from Gulf Islands Secondary in the late 1980s.

Several years later, he left the island to audition for major record labels in collaboration with Phil Collins' son Simon.

He also played with fellow islanders in Jet Set, and eventually started his own band called Free Coke for Supermodels. After the band broke up, narrowly missing out on a record deal, Jacquest took a few years off from performing.

The September 4 show marks his official return from retirement. Rebecca Nygard of the Island Girls will play an opening set before joining the Hard Rock Men onstage. Jacquest will be backed by Laughlin Meagher of Drop Radio on bass, and by hard rock drummer best known as Dino.

Damen Grooms, son of local blues legend Gene Grooms, will hit the stage to perform a hip-hop duo with Jacquest, and DJ Snakehead will provide between-set entertainment. The concert will also mark the release of a CD collection of Jacquest's older recordings called The Softie Sampler Vol. 1.

"Most people after hearing it can't believe it is me because in real life I come off as being so fey and unassuming. In truth, I'm a rock and roll maniac on the verge of being unhinged," said Jacquest, who has performed in the past under the alteregos of Pogo, JetDjango and Rottenbelly.

Barry Valentine prepares for third Simply Organic season at All Saints

Lovers of organ music will be delighted to know that the recital series Simply Organic heads into its third performance year in the skilled musical hands of Barry Valentine.

Now that the summer series of Music and Munch has moved into its monthly cycle of concerts on the first Wednesday of each month, Simply Organic resumes its weekly schedule on the remaining Wednesdays, beginning on September 8.

Following the pattern already established, music lovers will be given the opportunity to expand their knowledge of the organ and composers of its music in an informal, intimate setting.

'Valentine's uniquely understated and witty manner in the past two years has challenged, charmed and stirred appreciation of this genre of music and for his playing," states a Music Makers press release. "His programs of popular music for organ offer and bring to life both well known and obscure composers and their works. His prolific repertoire continues to emerge, often guided by requests from his audience, which enjoys contributing to the creative process.'

The work on refurbishing the beautiful All Saints church pipe organ will be completed by the end of October, when the full effects of work undertaken since its installation will add to the pleasure of Wednesday's recitals.

The transformation from the work will include the addition of a third manual and concert-goers will be fascinated to follow the final

Rustic Pear Tarts Pastry:

1 c. butter, cold and cut into 1/2 pieces 2 1/3 c. flour

1/3 c. brown sugar 1 1/2 c. pecans, chopped

1 tsp. vanilla

2 egg yolks 3 tbsp. cold water

Cut the butter into the flour, salt and sugar until fine. Add nuts, vanilla, eggs and water. Mix and form into 2 discs, wrap with Saran and chill for half an hour. Roll out pastry and cut 4 quarter-inch rounds to fit 3inch tart tins with a bit of an overhang.

Filling:

3/4 c. brown sugar 2 tbsp flour

1 tsp. cinnamon

3 tbsp. melted butter 12 ripe medium pears with

1 c. pecans, slightly broken

1/2 c. apricot jam

Combine the dry ingredients with the butter. Sprinkle 1/4 of mixture on the bottom of the tart shells. Peel pears, leaving stems, trip the bottom flat, reserve 1/4 c. crumb mixture. Roll pears in remaining crumbs and stand them in the 12 shells. Sprinkle 2/3 of the pecans around each pear and sprinkle with more crumbs. Place the rest of the pecans over the pears, sprinkle with the last crumble. Bake 20 min at 325 degrees until golden. Warm the jam and brush over the pears. Serve warm with whipped cream.

Keep it simple, stupid

I see that WestJet is planning to put seat-back televisions in all its airplanes.

As an aircraft user and confirmed fan of the airline, may I offer a word of Seat-back televisions on airplanes are a bad idea for WestJet. Just like the leather seats they've started putting in their planes. And those new-fangled headrests that supposedly "contour" to the passengers head.

WestJet is getting fancy, and fancy isn't their strong suit. The Calgary-based company became successful as the "no-frills" airline. People flocked to the WestJet ticket counter not because they wanted TV sets or leather seats or hi-tech headrests. They wanted cheap flights.

And WestJet delivered. Recently I had to fly from Victoria to Thunder Bay return. Air Canada wanted more than $2,100 to do the job. WestJet got me there and back for a little over $800. WestJet made itself The Volkswagen Beetle of the skies and quickly became the most profitable airline in the country.

Now it's tinkering with the very formula that made it a success. If they keep it up they'll be as snooty and insolvent as That Other Airline in no time.

What is it about the human animal that compels us to constantly fix things that work fine until we insure that they don't? Take the bicycle. There was a time when everybody rode simple, onespeed bikes with nice soft seats and fat, cushiony tires. They were cheap, durable and they lasted forever.

Today the average bike has anywhere up to 25 speeds. It's made of spaceage magnesium/titanium alloys and runs on tires that slew perfectly into sewer grates. It has shock absorbers, a sophisticated "braking system" and a Rube Goldbergish derailleur rig that breaks down more often than Liza Minnelli.

Oh yeah, and it costs a king's ransom to boot.

Kurt Harnett and Lance Armstrong need bikes like that. You and I would be fine with a CCM one-speed.

And razors. I happen to believe that one of the great inventions of the 20th century was the disposable razor. Unlike the noisy, expensive and inefficient electric model, the disposable razor is safe, quiet, cheap and recyclable. So what's Gillette doing to the disposable?

Putting a battery in it.

Welcome to the M3 Power Razor. It's got a slot in the handle for a triple A battery, which, Gillette says, provides "a gentle, pulsing action," which supposedly lifts whiskers for a closer shave.

Price for the M3 kit? $19.99. Which is about 10 times more than I pay for a six pack of Bic disposables. Wasn't broken, Gillette.

Didn't need fixing.

But then there's LG Electronics. This company is to Gillette Razors as Microsoft is to Mississippi mud wrestling. LG Electronics has just unveiled its latest brainwave: the Internet Refrigerator.

The new fridge has a cyclopean computer screen on the front panel and a touch pad allowing users to, for instance, connect to a database of 300 recipes, searchable by ingredient.

Don't have the two ounces of smoked Gruyere the recipe calls for? No problemo. You can order the ingredients from an online grocer, right from your refrigerator. The Internet Refrigerator (hereafter referred to as Hal) will also remind you when paradise.

the celery is wilting and the meat loaf in the far back corner is growing green fur.

There's a built-in camera, of course, in case you want to leave a video message for the kids. Oh, yes . . . and you can watch TV on Hal and play downloaded MP3s through its speakers.

"It's really a communica-tions centre," burbles Frank Lee, the firm's online marketing manager. "The kitchen is the centre of the home, so this makes sense.'

Perhaps to a cyborg, Frank. And a rich cyborg, at that. The LG behemoth retails for $11,999. Maybe I'm a curmudgeon, but I find it increasingly difficult to watch TV in the comfort of my living room, never mind standing at my refrigerator. And the day I hear P. Diddy emanating from my vegetable crisper is the day I pull the plug and go back to an icebox.

Remember the advice of Horace, the Roman poet who lived and wrote a couple of millennia ago: "Avoid greatness. In a cottage there may be more real happiness than kings or their favourites

Amen. And if you throw in an icebox, you'll be living in

Schneider 'bags' Simply Salt Spring contest win

Salt Spring resident Roselyne Schneider won the Simply Salt Spring draw last week, along with a handmade bag full of locally made Salt Spring products.

Especially prized by Schneider was the lavender donated by Bella Lavaré Lavender Farm.

"The scent reminds me of my childhood in France," she said when accepting the prize on August 23 at the Community Economic Development (CED) Project

Schneider won the contest by being the first entry chosen to have successfully named three products made on Salt Spring that are sold in the grocery store where she entered the draw.

The gift bag contained over $300 in prizes and gift certificates.

Other donors to the bag were: Aroma Crystal Therapy, ArtCentric Co-op Gallery, Beeswax Works, Bigfoot Herbs, Falcon Farm, Ganges Village Market, Organic Planet Soap, Harlan's Chocolates, Landing Party Gallery, Magic Cottage Creations, Salt Spring Island Bandana Co., Salt Spring Island Monetary Foundation, Shopon-Saltspring.com, The Local and Thrifty Foods.

Islanders and visitors wanting a Simply Salt Spring shopping bag can purchase one at Ganges Village Market, Thrifty Foods and the Visitor Information

The Simply Salt Spring logo is an initiative of the Community Economic Development Project.

Its aim is to support local businesses and increase recognition of local products and services.

In future, the logo will also be visible online with the website www.simplysaltspring.com, connecting people to producers, retailers, artists and other businesses using the logo.

Island-raised man educates locals on Falun Gong practices, persecutions

By JENNIFER MCFEE Staff Writer

Ben Taylor sets up in Centennial Park in the mid-August heat, facing Gasoline Alley with a spread of colourful Falun Gong pamphlets on the grass in front of him. He closes his eyes, inhales deeply and moves through a flowing series of five meditative exercises, which he finishes in a seated half-lotus position.

When he opens his eyes, Taylor explains that he first encountered the Chinese practice of Falun Gong through a book and video his friend sent him four years

"I studied the book and immediately it just changed my perspective on things. I was really searching for a better, healthier lifestyle," says 26-year-old Taylor, who moved to Victoria from Salt Spring nearly three years

"I grew up here, and in this park I used to drink on a regular basis. I got in trouble with the police and barely passed high school. It's interesting that I'm here now, and through this practice, I've quit all these bad things, all the drinking, drugs, destructive behaviour."

The teachings of Falun Gong, also called Falun Dafa, are based on principles of truthfulness, compassion and forbearance. Taylor finds the practice simple and clear, and he strives to cultivate these three principles in himself.

"I had a lot of stress growing up and I wanted a way to get through that and find a better way to interact with people and dissolve conflicts. It improved my relationship with people, my family. Salt Spring's like an extended family," he says.

Taylor is approached by young people as he sits in the park, curious about what he is doing.

"It's been good. The local people I grew up with come up and chat. I get to explain what this practice has done for me. I went from a juvenile delinquent to a role model in these years. I understand what it's like to grow up in a small place with all the pressures of the world," says Taylor, who knows many island youth through volunteer DJ workshops he put on at the Core Inn.

While he relates the benefits of practising Falun Gong, he also tells people about the widespread persecution of practitioners in China.

"The teaching was taught publicly in 1992 by Li Hongzhi. It spread by word of mouth all over China. Between 1992 and 1999, about 100 million people were practising Falun Gong. With this popularity also came persecution," he says, pointing out that the Chinese government made the practice illegal in 1999.

"A lot of people are fearful of finding out the truth and speaking out on behalf of Falun Gong. They could be tortured, put in forced labour camps. People were put inked signatures on a peti-falundafa.org in mental hospitals, given forced injections and were sometimes killed. They try to take as much as they can from practitioners."

which he says has changed his life.

STRESS-AID: Ben Taylor moves through meditative movements associated with Falun Gong — a practice

All around the world, practitioners are raising awareness about the persecutions in China, he says.

"You really feel connected by all these practices in Canada and around the world to try to stop the persecution from Chinese leaders. It's all a grassroots movement. It's quite remarkable," says Taylor, who is a Chinese language student at Camosun College.

"I came here to let people know about the persecutions. I found Salt Spring is pretty in tune with what's happening."

He points out a list of tion in front of him, which asks Canada's Attorney General to prosecute torturers of Falun Gong practitioners.

"My mom is the first person on the petition. My family doesn't practice, but they're supportive. I'm sure they've seen the changes in me and know Falun Gong is great," he says.

"We're not a religion and we teach for free anywhere around the world. We don't collect any money, even with the persecutions. We practice in a sense all day, every day. It's holistic. We work on improving our characters and freeing ourselves from attachments."

For more information, contact Taylor at 250-386-0997 or bentaylor@shaw.ca, or visit the website at www.

Grandma's garden and Japanese design among new fall fair flower classes

By ARLENE DASHWOOD Special to the Driftwood

If you love the flower section of the Salt Spring Fall Fair, you'll be happy to know that there are a number of new things to look for this

We hope to encourage many people to enter, whether for the first time, or as regular participants.

Firstly, there are two new trophies:

In the Any Other Flowers class, there are two new trophies being introduced.

• CEDAR BEACH TRO-PHY will be awarded for Best Entry in Classes 27 to

• CHARLES BUCKLEY MEMORIAL TROPHY will be awarded for the Best Entry in Classes 40 to 49, 51 to 56.

(Class 50 has its own trophy.)

The Floral Arts Section has some exciting changes.

Keep in mind the dual themes of this year's fair: Agriculture — Our Island Tradition and Discover the Child in You.

In the Niche Class there are three brand new catego-

• GRANDMA'S GAR-DEN, a composition in an old-style container.

• FUN FANCIFUL BOU-QUET, an arrangement.

• A JAPANESE STYLE DESIGN, an asymmetrical floral design.

In the Open Staging Class we have created:

· CHILD'S PLAY, a miniature design.

The key words in these titles provide you with direc-

An "arrangement" consists of fresh cut plant material, with base if necessary, but no accessories.

A "composition" may consist of dried, weathered or treated plant material and/ or accessories with or without fresh-cut plant material. A "design" may be either an "arrangement" or a "composition.' Please note that we had a "gremlin" in the editing part of this year's fall fair catalogue.

There is mix-up in the descriptive section under Floral Art.

The correct numbers are the ones listed for each class. Ignore the numbers in the "descriptive paragraph."

See you at the fair!

SEEP kids put eye to nature

From spotting pipefish, sun stars and moon snails to practising sea-sprayed songs, art and drama, Salt Spring's first Summer Ecological Exploration Program (SEEP) has been declared a success.

"We had a blast," said participating teacher Sarah Myers last week.

The week-long marine studies camp held at Burgoyne Bay August 16-20 saw full registration with 26 kids aged six to 12 participating.

The program pooled environmental studies and the arts, led by Gulf Islands School District teachers, youth mentors and community members with specific skills to share.

"We wanted to show how the different aspects of our life work into a natural setting," explained Myers.

Biologist David Denning did a seine pull through the eelgrass meadow to illustrate its range of sea life, and Chris Arnett offered a First Nations presentation.

Donald Gunn led a special nature walk, Yvonne Adalian created a theatre component, Johanna Hoskins handled the fine arts, and Jim Raddysh the music.

Teaching staff were Myers, Robyn Huntley Smith, Sarah Stoffelsma and Molly Lynes-Ford.

Youth mentors were Calum Gunn, Emma Rimmer, Isaac Raddysh and Matthew Burn-

"The group worked really well together," observed Myers about the variously aged kids and the older mentors

Myers said it was great to see how much the children already knew and wanted to share about West Coast marine life.

"It was this knowledge base that never ended."

On program evaluation sheets, parents praised "the safe environment and enthusiasm provided by the leaders," the "emphasis on open exploration and not just teaching 'the facts';" and the large amount of time spent outdoors.

"Please do this again, and throughout the year," requested one parent.

SEEP already plans to repeat the camp next summer, hopes to offer workshops throughout the year and is considering setting up a Friday program at Fulford school.

"Fulford is making a commitment to being the nature school," said Myers.

SEEP was presented by Fulford Community Nature School and the Gulf Islands Centre for Environmental Learning.

People wanting to be on the e-mail list for future events can send a message to fulford@sd64.bc.ca or call Fulford school at 653-9223.

Do you want to graduate?

To start, just contact the SD 64 Learning Center of your choice.

Whether you need a few courses, a full high school graduation program, or want to earn an Adult Graduation Diploma, there are a surprising number of Gulf Islands choices.

- * Self-paced courses almost any course, almost anytime.
- * Teacher-led classes one class a week in ten-week blocks.
  - Available at most centers. Call for details.

Adult Graduation Diploma:

- You need only five courses to earn a diploma,
  - ... but you can take as many as you like.
- You won't need your past school records.
  - ... You and your teacher will decide the best place to start.
- You bring personal things like a pen and notebook.
  - ... We'll provide the rest (and there are no tuition fees).
- You should come prepared to have fun,
  - ... because a class of adult students tends to be that way.

ber schedule for the Salt Spring Island Trail and Nature Club.

Firstly, our fall trip to Strathcona Park is on September 7, 8 and 9. If any members who have signed up for the trip have any questions about it, please call Ron Hall at 538-0046.

Secondly, we have been asked to help with the Great Canadian Shoreline Cleanup from September 11-19. More details will be forthcoming at the blackberry feast on September 14.

Lastly, there is no social evening this month, and watch for October's schedule in the September 29 issue of the Driftwood.

Walkers

September 14: Meet in ArtSpring parking lot at 10 a.m. to traipse the town trails with Bud Williams prior to the "blackberry bash" in Mouat Park at noon.

September 21: Carpool from ArtSpring at 10 a.m. to Beaver Point Hall (10:20 a.m.) Jacquie Severn will lead us along Menhinick Drive and through the reserve lands to China Beach.

September 28: Off-island today. Carpool from Art-Spring at 9 a.m. to catch the 10 a.m. Fulford ferry.

Join Val Wethersett and Janet Andersen for an easy walk through rural Saanich from Island View Drive to Mattick's Farm and return.

Pack your own lunch or purchase at Mattick's Farm.

Hikers

September 14: Hikers to meet at ArtSpring at 10 a.m. for a gentle walk-about in the Ganges area ahead of the blackberry festival.

September 21: Join Alan Clews on a new approach to Mount Erskine.

Carpool to leave ArtSpring at 9:45 a.m.

September 28: Expect a fairly rigorous hike with Fred Powell leading the way from Burgoyne Bay up Mount Sullivan.

Carpool to leave ArtSpring at 9:45 a.m. to meet up with south-enders at the Burgoyne Triangle at 10 a.m.

Ramblers

September 14: We join the club for the blackberry festival in Mouat Park. Meet at Centennial at 10 a.m. to walk up or go to the park directly. Bring anything made of blackberries along with lunch.

September 21: An offisland trip to walk around Victoria Harbour via the boardwalk with lunch at Spinnaker's Pub.

Meet across from Fulford Inn at 9:15 a.m. to get the 10 a.m. ferry. Paul Ranney will lead and provide maps.

September 28: Meet at Centennial Park at 10 a.m. Leader and destination will be announced later.

Local author's latest novel promises action, adventure

By JENNIFER MCFEE Staff Writer

Local author Anthony Bruce brings a tale of international intrigue mingled with Salt Spring suspense to readers in his fourth novel The Gatekeeper of Lies.

In this fast-paced action novel, readers follow the story of Salt Spring architect Thomas DuPlessis, formerly known as Tomas Molnar in his days as a spy for the French government.

French, Canadian and American intelligence agencies seek out DuPlessis for secret information he possesses, but he is incognito after moving to the island and taking on a new iden-

Plot twists that include a missing hitchhiker, mysterious photographs and assassinations in Africa culminate into a tale that kept me on the edge of my seat.

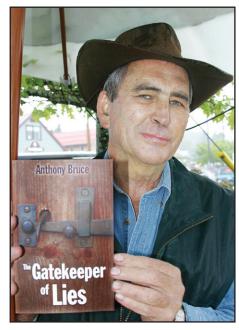

Rapidly switching settings, interspersed with flashbacks to scenes in Africa, built a sense of anticipation right from the opening pages.

The prologue set in Bosnia captured my interest, and the next scene transported me to a realistic rain-drenched evening on Fulford-Ganges Road.

Salt Spring residents will enjoy the familiarity of local descriptions, ranging from Fulford ferry traffic to an adrenaline-inducing walk in Ruckle Park

The Driftwood is even mentioned by name, as is publisher Tony Richards, who chats with an enigmatic stranger in the novel.

While the detailed plot design was enough to keep me interested, its complexity required the involvement of many main players, causing occasional confusion. A cast of 13 characters is listed at the beginning of the book, and, at first, I had to keep flipping back to this roster to figure out who was who.

I was further distracted by a spattering of typographical and punctuation errors throughout the 218-page book, and the writing sometimes felt weighed down by an abundance of adjectives. These overlooked details made the work sometimes seem more like a manuscript rather than an edited final

Despite these minor problems, The Gatekeeper of Lies is a captivating story worth the read.

Saturna principal was 'gifted soul'

By MAGGIE HAYES

Special to the Driftwood My husband Michael and I met Taimi Hindmarch and her husband Bob on Saturna Island in 1973 when the island's population was 172.

Taimi was teacher/principal at the two-room elementary school, and Michael became the second teacher.

Taimi was a life force and one of the most unique, loving people we have ever known. She welcomed us into her family and instantly became part of ours. We saw how excitedly children related to her and how much she adored them.

As a teacher, she was brilliant and insightful. The school shone with students' photos, artwork and creative writing, mirroring Taimi's warm, bright, positive, intelligent, curious and inclusive personality.

The Hindmarches soon escorted us to one of the "pig barbecues" that are a main-disagreed) like "duelling banjos" or tag-team wrestlers about old classmates and past experiences.

We lived in the humble teacherage in the valley. They lived in an exquisite home Bob had built at the top of the "Hindmarch Hill": spectacular panoramic views, staircase curving around the grand piano, colour, art and books everywhere — paintings, old family photos, lovely fabrics reminiscent of Taimi's proud Finnish roots.

We had many a venison dinner and animated discussion up there with Taimi and Bob, and (these were our "brick and board bookcase" days), they cheerfully had spaghetti or chili down at our place.

Taimi radiated interest in everything and everyone, especially children. She always found just the right thing to say to our two older boys. When daughter Cait was born, she elatedly met the ferry on our return, with bottles of sherry and a huge teddy bear.

Babies especially bore straight into her heart: Taimi's arms rose like wings to reach for them, with all the love in the world in her eyes. She, like Bob, delighted in our youngest son's memory. When he was not yet two, Paco would sit on Bob's knee at the ferry store to be shown off: "OK, count to 20." "Now in French." "Now the alphabet." "Now the alphabet backwards," and Bob would beam as the little boy chirped out magical sounds the older kids had taught him.

When, after retirement and health concerns, Taimi and Bob moved to Victoria, we too were living there. We were delighted to see them more often and to continue discussing current events and family doings. Taimi was part of dinners and theatre excursions, and became fast friends with our own parents as well.

A gifted soul, Taimi herself was a gift to everyone, including thousands of students whose lives she touched. Michael and I have often talked about how much we learned from her, how much we owe her.

What would make Taimi happiest is that Michael feels he became a far better teacher for the next three decades because of her friendship, influence, guidance, support and example - and all the young people he went on to teach were further beneficiaries.

Taimi did indeed "light up a room" and many lives dimmed when she left us.

We are thankful beyond measure that we knew her, and wish her family peace in the precious memories of Taimi and her beloved Bob. How much they were loved; how much so many of us will miss them both.

Each of Taimi's students, neighbours, friends and colleagues has a treasured story, a warm reminiscence. Take a moment to write it down for her daughters and their families. It would be a perfect "au revoir and thank you, dearest Taimi, thanks for everything."

Taimi Hindmarch (born in 1916) died in Vancouver on August 11. Memories can be sent to daughter Leni Hoover, 3125 Glasgow Avenue, Victoria, B.C. V8X 1L8.

stay on the island, similar to the July 1st lamb event more widely known.

Taimi discreetly told us who was who and what was what, which was very revealing for two city kids sampling small island life for the first time. (Taimi was a big help when I wrote the Saturna column for the Driftwood!)

We all spent a lot of time in that community hall, the focus of Saturna social life, the highlight being the school's magical Christmas concert, standing room only.

Taimi and Bob were islanders long before we arrived, and were active community members and respected role

Their shared passions included family (three cherished daughters, partners, grandchildren and, later, great-grandchildren), Saturna life, their previous time in Ladysmith and "the Diamond" area, many friends, reading, politics and, of course, each other.

Entertaining conversationalists with strong opinions and phenomenal memories, they had been together forever. They often talked (and

Islanders Adams and Lucich bring home pony club awards

Two Salt Spring Island Pony Club members returned from the annual championships competition August 21-22 with major awards, and one of them added yet another honour last weekend.

Lisa Adams and Shana Lucich competed with 42 members of seven other pony clubs on Vancouver Island at the Saanich fairgrounds Lucich, riding Lion's Brew, earned the Aggregate Award for having the best overall combined score of dressage and show jumping.

Riding Georgina (owned by Ethel Magnus), Lisa Adams earned the Reserve Champion for Dressage, having the second-best combined score for two dressage

Then this past weekend in Chilliwack, Adams, again on Georgina, won champion for her division with two first places at the first level — the 15 to 21 years category.

The new national and primary show called Rising Stars was created only for riders under the age of 21.

The show was designed and organized by Jacqui Oldham and Wendy Christoff to promote dressage among young people. Boosting over 35 entries in the national sector and 66 in the provincial, the show was deemed a great Adams started riding with Jacky Cooper on Salt Spring Island at age nine. She has ridden everything from the fjords at Camp Narnia to warmbloods at Phonetic Spring Farms. At 16, she is currently working on her B level pony club.

In other local club news, eight riders successfully completed their pony club level on August 7-8. Pony club testers from Abbotsford and Nanaimo travelled to Salt Spring to test the practical skills and knowledge of the candidates.

The C2 level was awarded to Julianna Sliwowska and Shana Lucich, while Samantha Charlton and Kaitlin Fraser earned the D2 level.

The D1 level was awarded to Brenna McIntyre and Marina Holding, while the D level was awarded to Nima McDuff and Cassandra Wic-

Another group of members will be examined at the end of September.

At the Salt Spring Fall Fair Horse Show on Saturday, September 18, pony club members will perform a quadrille demonstration, with multiple dressage riders performing to music.

3 Salt Spring archers fetch national gold, silver, bronze

By MITCHELL SHERRIN Staff Writer

Three islanders hauled home a booty of eight medals, including six golds, from two recent national-level archery championships in Canada and the U.S.

Greg and Lynne Durward each won two gold medals in master compound divisions while Ken Cameron collected a silver and a bronze in the bowhunter unlimited master division at the Canadian Archery Championships that ran in Caledon, Ontario between July 31-August 6.

"It's phenomenal when three archers go to the nationals from Salt Spring and bring home six medals,' Cameron said.

He began participating in the sport two years ago and won a gold medal in his first major competition at the nationals last year, he said.

'The Buddhist monks took up archery for meditation and it's very relaxing."

Cameron said he has learned a great deal about archery by practising with the top-ranked Durwards.

One week prior to the Canadian nationals, the Durwards added to their plunder of medals with another two golds at the U.S. National Archery Association Outdoor Target Championships in Redding, Pennsylvania.

"We shot 13 out of 14 days and we spent the 14th day on a nine-hour drive," Greg Durward said.

"I bet we shot 1,500 arrows in two weeks."

The two tournaments were especially strong performances for his wife Lynne, who is now ranked second among master women, he said.

"It virtually assures her a spot in Spain next summer for the World Target Championships."

Lynne set three records at the Canadian Championships and broke the women's master's record at the U.S. Nationals.

"It was the biggest Canadian Nationals we've ever had in terms of numbers. We had 165 archers."

The two islanders competed as guests in the U.S. Nationals, he said.

They will next compete at the B.C. Outdoor Target Championships in Coquitlam and Maple Ridge this coming weekend.

Slo-pitch event aids Cap Rouge II survivors

The Galiano Eagles beat Salt Spring's FC slo-pitch team 16-10 in the final game of the Second Annual Rod Wilson Memorial Slo-pitch Tourney held at Galiano Island on August 20-22, but none of the participants on eight teams were too riled up about scores during the fundraising event.

The tourney was held two years after the Cap Rouge II capsized and killed five islanders, including Galiano's Rod Wilson.

The slo-pitch tourney raised money for Wilson's children, James (12) and Patrick (14).

The event also allowed islanders to get together for some friendly play while remembering friends and family members lost in the boating tragedy.

The Cap Rouge II also claimed the lives of Wilson's cousin Kathy Mabberly, also from Galiano, her children Amanda and Wyatt, and Salt Spring's Tony Head.

Four Salt Spring teams attended the event, along with teams from Mayne, Saturna and Delta.

"If somebody was going to win, it should have been Galiano," said Salt Spring's 911 player-coach Kristina Kilbourn.

Salt Spring's Vultures even bowed out of the final to give the Galiano team their berth, said tourney organizer Maria Basarab.

"They play Chad [Little]'s team all the time on Salt Spring. They thought it would be good to have Tony's sister's team play against Rod Wilson's team."

Chris Head believes her partner Chad Little deliberately gave the game to Galiano. "It was the right thing to do," said Chris Head.

Basarab agreed Little made a gracious gesture at the end of a close game.

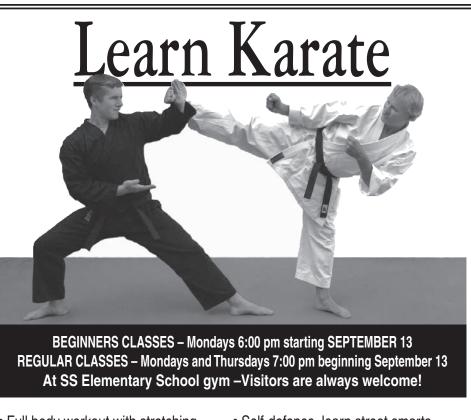

"He just looked at us and shook his head. We both knew what was going on. He backed his fielders off." Mayne earned third place after their semi-final game against the Vultures, said Basarab.

September 12 Driftwood golf fundraiser drives for Ssplash

Golfers can practise driving with beachballs and dunking into wading pools in preparation for the Second Annual Driftwood Benefit Golf Tournament set to tee-off at the Salt Spring Island Golf and Country Club on Sunday, September 12.

The golfing fundraiser aims to keep a focus on fun, said tourney organizer Alice Richards.

A nine-hole scramble will include novelty events such as a long-drive competition with beach balls and a chipin contest where participants fire at a wading pool, she said

Golfers who prefer a more conventional game will also be able to hone their skills on some traditional tournament staples, she noted.

The golf event is slated to raise money for the Salt Spring Indoor Pool Society (Ssplash) this year.

"There will be lots of opportunities to spend loonies and twoonies for the cause."

Last year, the tournament raised $4,000 for youth soccer and minor baseball programs on Salt Spring when over 100 people participated in the tourney, dinner and awards presentations that followed.

Since this year's beneficiary is Ssplash, the event has been buoyed by the group's large roster of organized volunteers, Richards said.

"The community has also rallied to supply lots of prizes."

The golf tournament includes a lamb and salmon barbecue dinner prepared by Jim and Connie Moulton.

Participants will tee off with a shotgun start in draws at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. All players will receive a registration prize, Richards said.

"There are still a few spaces left."

Registration forms are available at the Driftwood office and at the Salt Spring Island Golf and Country Club

Tournament entry costs $50, which includes the barbecue, while a dinner-only option is $20.

WINNING TEAM: Carla Lalonde rides BGR Prince F-Braveheart on the way to a trophy win at the Vancouver Island Exhibition in Nanaimo.

Brave takes trophy

Canadian horse owner Carla Lalonde and her horse BGR Prince F-Braveheart won the Overall High Point Western Horse trophy at the Vancouver Island Exhibition in Nanaimo over the weekend.

This is the fair's fifth year of hosting the second-largest Canadian horse show in North America.

"It had a huge turnout with magnificent horses from across the globe," said Lalonde. "The Canadian is known for its versatility and Brave is a wonderful example."

Along with the trophy win, the duo also placed very well in driving classes, with two seconds, two fifths in English and a secvond in Showmanship.

"I guess with the $320 in winnings, the horse will get a new show bridle and his owner can just stare at the trophy!" joked Lalonde.

Lamb roasts tennis opponents Peter Lamb skewered wins David and Keith Barclay Erica Ross and Anne Stew-

Peter Lamb skewered wins in both the mixed doubles and men's doubles events at the Gulf Islands Open Tennis Tournament last weekend.

Paired up with Ina Curran in mixed doubles and Patrick Lee in men's play, Lamb also basted his way to the final match in the men's singles before he bowed to David Barclay. Keith Barclay was the men's singles consolation winner and Jack Barclay placed as consolation finalist.

placed second in men's doubles. Jack Barclay and David Rowse were men's doubles consolation winners while Bob Weeden and Cecil Branson placed as consolation finalists.

In mixed doubles, Sylvia and Mike Leedham were finalists. Doreen Johnson and Jay MacAulay won the consolation match, and Ken and Irene Tongue were consolation finalists.

Erica Ross and Anne Stewart won the women's doubles. Leedham and Tongue placed as finalists. Johnson and Carol Wright won the consolation match over Jennifer Morgan and Julia Hatchard. In women's singles play, the final match between Tongue and Johnson will be delayed until Thursday at 5 p.m.

Pat Sutherland won the consolation match and Barbara Freitas placed as a consolation finalist.

Local cyclists soar in time trials

Four islanders took an 80-kilometre spin from Duncan to Youbou and back as part of the B.C. Masters Cycling Time Trial Championships on Sunday

"Salt Spring does really well in the master races," said participant Bob Sayer.

Denis Ross placed second in the category for men aged 35-39 with a time of 2:07:30, Ian Mahon placed third in the category for men aged 65-69 (2:31), John Nilssen placed fourth in the category for men aged 45-49 (2:09:30) and Sayer beat his personal target with a time of 2:18 in the men's 45-49 division.

"All of us broke the national standard," Sayer said.

The national standard limits who can attend national-level races, he noted.

"A group of us are hoping to go to the World Masters Championships in Edmonton next July."

The islanders faced challenging opposing winds on the route to Youbou but had the winds at their backs on the 40-kilometre return leg.

This Week's

Horoscope The Sun, Mars and Jupiter are all in the sign of Virgo now.

Virgo is the sign associated with work, service, health, humility, refinement.

purification, cleansing, clearing and wholeness. Virgo is letailed and technical that focuses on all the parts working together in unison. Critical analysis and precise anecdotal approaches are Virgo's style. Thus, Virgo is interested in techniques, methods and systems of operation. This means knowing how and why all the parts work together as they do, or not. Generally, this is a good time to clear, cleanse, purify and fix things as necessary. Tending to one's own health by way of body cleanses is classically a Virgo intention. Of course, everyone has the sign of Virgo somewhere in their Astrology chart. Further, all themes associated with all the Zodiac signs are simply different aspects of the whole life process that we are all destined to experience. This is a good time to take more radicăl measures than you might normally take. To be more honest about your overall state of health and willing to do what is necessary to gain a sense of renewal by way of cleansing processes of one kind and/or another is Virgo's humble command.

Aries (Mar 21 - AP 20) A time of re-evaluations about your overall lifestyle is upon you. You want a more artistic and healthy flow. Adjusting your rhythm does include the change of season that is on the horizon. You must make clear choices and decisions. It is up to you to design and tailor intentions specific to your needs. Humility and honesty about certain behavior patterns will go a long way now. Learn to accept what is, as it is, initially. Once you can see without judgment or reaction you will be closer to better choices about how to respond wisely. Make adjustments for better health.

Taurus (Apr 21 - May 20) Cultivating and refining your creative pursuits is a central theme now. These Pursuits might include investments of one kind or another. Redesigning, cleaning, renovating and other such improvement approaches are on the to do list. Creating more space and/or boundaries at home is likely. Your intention is to solidify your overall foundation. Focus at home and let the world be as it is, for now.

Gemini (May 21 - Jun 20)

A return to subjectivity to regain your center and confidence is a central goal now. You want to reconsider your ideals, intentions and direction in your life. Above all, you want to feel secure. This includes your emotional and mental state as well as physical, material and financial realities. To achieve this deep sense of confidence you need to let go of certain habitual patterns. These include thought patterns and reactions. Focus upon letting go of all expectations and accept things as they are.

Cancer (Jun 21 - Jul 21) A busy time with many errands and tasks to attend to finds you here, there and everywhere. With Mercury retrograde now, you will have to exercise a lot of patience for the next few weeks. Expect that there may be delays and other mishaps with which to contend. Give yourself more time than usual to complete tasks. In your communications, take some time to consider what and how to say what you must before engaging. Written lists, instructions and/or expressions might work best.

Leo (Jul 22 - Aug 22)

Improving the quality of your work, your marketing approach and your overall professional image, is in the spotlight. The time has come to trim any excess fat. This implies a more streamlined approach. Your focus could be on time considerations, on quality of product or service, on your budget and expense accounts, or on your own body image. Reduction, refinement. and elimination to facilitate a smoother flow - that is the

Virgo (Aug 23 - Sep 22)

You are in a pioneering and expansive mood. Change is brewing on relationship fronts. The time has come to negotiating a new deal. You need to feel your wings somehow. You have been working to create a free lifestyle and now it is time to really see if it flies. The pressure will build throughout September. However, it could prove to be sheer excitement rather than anxiety. In any case, you will be busy make plans and provisions for your journey. The time has come rise-up!

Libra (Sep 22 - Oct 22)

zaking plans and other things behind the scenes, continues. Make room to receive your new directions rather than relying too much on habitual agendas is key. The more you can get out of the way, so to speak, and allow the flow of life's intelligence to guide you now, the better. After all, you do have a destiny. In other words, there is a rhyme and a reason to our times and seasons. Your destiny is calling, pulling, and pushing. This is a call to be here now and allow. You can take notes as the inspiration descends! Scorpio (Oct 22 - Nov 22)

Meetings and gatherings with unique individuals with their own brand of creative genius are keeping you entertained and excited. You are eager and willing to learn and receive guidance now. This implies close associations with significant others. Whether in business, or love, or purely for interest you are eager to share. Projects and experimental activities present learning opportunities. At a deeper level, this is your chance to cultivate a witness perspective on your life.

Sagittarius (Nov 22 - Dec 21)

Balancing personal will with willingness to yield to life's flow is a central focus now. You are eager to take charge of vour life in a new way. In some respects, this implies specific choices and actions. In other respects, it implies patience and a willingness for answers, openings, and right timing to present itself. This is a good time to gather the tools and resources and to make the plans needed to follow through on certain projects rather than actually acting upon them.

Prepare yet wait for a clear go-ahead signal.

Capricorn (Dec 22 - Jan 19) Desires to learn and gather new information and knowledge are strong now. You are in a contemplative and philosophical mood. Travel, education, religion and other cultural stimulations are gaining your attention. You may have to or simply want to travel to work. Somewhere relatively close and familiar will probably prove suitable now. The time has come to expand into the next intention and explore new aspects of your creative intelligence.

Aquarius (Jan 20 - Feb 19) Purging, clearing, cleansing and other endeavors to purify are now in focus. Cleansing and nourishing your own body might be the best place to start. Alternatively, clearing and cleaning your home space will help you to take a fresh start again. As you tend to your own needs for health and well being you are indirectly giving to others. Step out of the limelight and give more attention to your basic needs. A meditative approach is ideal now.

Pisces (Feb 20 - Mar 20)

You are in a process of learning to break free from old restrictive attitudes and patterns. You want to experience more freedom on all relationship fronts. You are somewhat nervous about your approach and the implications. In any case, you are getting ready to negotiate new deals. This is a leap of faith for you. Trust that this process is a part of your destiny. Avoid letting your opinions, expectations and agendas to get in the way of this flow.

One Tonne Challenge ready to roll

kicks off a special feature on the One Tonne Challenge, which will be launched at the Salt Spring Fall Fair on September 18-19.

Articles contributed by the Earth Festival Society will describe a variety of initiatives that Salt Spring Islanders are taking to reduce greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions.

As well, there will be practical suggestions about

This week the Driftwood how to reduce your energy consumption and put dollars directly in your pocket, and Yoram will produce a Tip of the Week that can help you get prepared to join the One Tonne Challenge Club.

When the series is complete, we will publish a cutout of the best of the tips in a summary form that can be mounted on refrigerators as a constant reminder of how each person can make a difference.

Over the next few weeks watch for articles contributed by writers, environmental activists and community

This week's article introduces the One Tonne Challenge and provides some general information about current energy consumption patterns on Salt Spring Island. Future articles will be on transportation and food.

Measures being taken by individuals, businesses and institutions to conserve energy and install simple GHGreducing technologies will also be explored.

Readers are also invited to send in their ideas about saving energy. Let islanders know what you have discovered about conserving energy, saving water, reducing your reliance on the automobile, growing your own food, and making your home more comfortable while using less electricity, oil, propane or wood heat.

One Tonne Challenge articles will also be mounted on the new website — www. saltspring-one-tonnechallenge.org — which is now up and running.

PLAYMATE: Young Stuart Hambrook enjoys the playground at Salt Spring Centre School as island children prepare to return to the books early next week.

One tonne kit offers up fun while addressing serious garbage issues

By KATE LESLIE

Special to the Driftwood

Salt Spring is about to embark on a great experiment — a deliberate, documented, but entirely voluntary attempt to cut our individual greenhouse gas emissions by one tonne per person per year.

Be sure to stop by the Earth Festival Society booth at this year's Fall Fair, where you can pick up your One Tonne Challenge kit and enter the draw for great prizes.

The challenge is a fun exercise to help address a very serious issue: global climate change and our personal contributions to greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions, which are the cause of increasing average global temperatures and associated severe weather events. The kit can be used to calculate your current greenhouse gas emissions and to set a target to reduce them.

The Earth Festival Society is coordinating the One Tonne Challenge, with the help of the Salt Spring Island Conservancy, Island Natural Growers and other island groups. Sponsors include Environment Canada, Van-City Credit Union, the Islands Trust and the Capital Regional District.

The island initiative is part of a Canada-wide goal to reduce personal GHG emissions by one tonne or more.

How much is one tonne of GHG? A tonne of GHG would fill a very large (4,000-square-foot) house. You do not have to commit to save one tonne of greenhouse gas emissions to be eligible, nor are you limited to one tonne. The idea is to find out how much GHG you produce in a year, and to commit to reduce it.

You can work as an individual, a household or a group of friends, a club, a 5.2 tonnes of GHG emissions choir, a class or whatever will help to reach the goal Challenge kit provides con-of conserving energy and reducing greenhouse gas emissions.

Anyone who calculates their emissions using the One Tonne worksheets and returns the completed sheets to the Earth Festival Society will have their name automatically entered for a prize draw. The One Tonne Challenge Kit suggests a number of ways to reduce GHG emissions.

Estimated annual GHG emissions for the average Salt Spring Islander are 6.9 tonnes, or 11.2 tonnes, including food (GHG from flights not included).

Personal transportation and ferrying in our food - contributes to our high emissions.

More than 7.600 cars and pick-up trucks are registered on Salt Spring, each producing an estimated average of every year. The One Tonne crete tips for changing driving habits. The kit also suggests that a partial switch in consumption to local, organic food would reduce energy use and greenhouse gas emissions significantly since growing, packing and shipping conventional food purchases is our greatest fuel use.

As well, participants can find many ways to reduce emissions by saving energy in the home.

In addition to signing up for the One Tonne Challenge Club at the Fall Fair, more information is available from Marion Pape (537-4567) and Elizabeth White (537-2616).

They are also available to meet with community groups, organizations, businesses and clubs to help get people started with the One Tonne Challenge.

Next week read about transportation issues and how you can reduce your greenhouse gas emissions.
