A window into the hell of war

By PETER HAASE

Special to the Driftwood

When I was born in Liverpool in 1950, the fourth of four sons, my father Albert was 54 years old.

He was a man of many life experiences. My dad was not overseas during the Second World War, he was a captain fireman in what was called the Air Raid Precautions (ARP). His duty during the air raids on Liverpool was an overwhelming task because of the bombed and burning houses and streets, and rescuing people unlucky enough to not make it to the shelters in time.

During this time, from 1939 to 1945, he was awarded various medals for his bravery in saving lives and securing dangerous situations. He spoke tearfully to us lads about the loss of life, young and old, that he had to deal with sometimes day after day.

Tragedy of war was not a new thing for him because back in 1914, at the age of 18 (underaged as many sign-ups were), he enlisted for the First World War with three of his brothers. After three months training he was sent to France and very soon found himself in what might be described as a landscape of thousands of young boys becoming men very quickly. Albert served with the light horse/heavy artillery division. (You may have seen those pictures of three pairs of horses with a rider on one side of each pair pulling a cannon). These guns fired 60-pound shells and I remember him flexing his big biceps in his 70s and bragging about "four years of moving 60-pounders."

As young boys we would keep bugging him to tell us about those war years on the western front and Egypt. His reply was always that the things he experienced in those four years of hell should not be told to the young. Later, as we were a little older and more insistent, he finally started to open up with his incredible stories of his time in the Great War.

He served at Ypres, the Marne, and was badly wounded with shrapnel at the battle of the Somme, where he also lost his brother just a short distance from his post. He was sent back to England and then to convalesce in Egypt with many other wounded and then back to the action before the closing of the war in 11-11.

On one occasion the captain of his troop was shot in the head by a sniper as they sat shoulder to shoulder on a log to have a smoke. My dad spoke very sadly of life in the trenches. The dismembered bodies everywhere, the rats, the overwhelming stench of death. The unbearable screaming of the injured unable to get first aid relief due to snipers. The howling of the hundreds of dogs (which were used in the trenches for things such as delivering messages in dangerous places). The cries of the injured horses badly cut up from shell fire, the dehumanization of what used to be happy young English, Scottish and Welsh lads. The rum that was handed out to the boys (yes, boys) to keep their courage up in the face of death.

There was the occasional suicide in the lines and also once in a while a firing squad for deserters. The unforgiving winters where everything was covered in mud and ice, the sanitary conditions were unbearable and the food always questionable. All in the name of what? Greed, power and fear.

After the war, Albert received 96 English pounds for his four-year service in the army, went to sea in the merchant marine as most Liverpool boys do and later became a professional soccer player.

Like thousands of other disillusioned returning soldiers, he sold his medals for a few pounds, knowing fully well that politics and honesty never go together. Later in 1966, when he was 70 years old, we as a family all immigrated to Australia. At 88 years old, after sending a letter to the Queen, he received all his medals, gold and silver, in perfect duplication from the British War Office.

Most soldiers, even today, come from poor of working class backgrounds. I wonder why? I suggest those who thirst for war — the politicians, the war industrialists, the Hollywood film producers that glibly push war movies for profit, the oil barons, the CEOs of the finance world that foot the bills for weapons — all these people should be the first in line with their children and grandchildren if they want war so much.

The old saying that "the first casualty of war is truth" is not completely correct. The lies from both sides start up way before the war. War has no winners if it only has profit makers.

Terrorists come in all shapes and sizes. In fact, some really bad ones are clean shaven and wear three-piece suits — go figure. By the way, which country has the largest stockpile of weapons of mass destruction? Will the UN send their inspectors into that country and demand removal of such and a reversal of policy? I doubt it.

Most people already know who runs the world. As long as politically uneducated people swallow the lies and follow misguided religious rhetoric — whether eastern or western — we will continue to send young men and women into wars while the rich send their young to the finest universities.

Tuned Air offers stirring reverence at weekend concerts

By GAIL SJUBERG
Staff Writer

A performance by a choral group which has in the past accomplished amazing musical feats comes with an unavoidable aura of anticipation.

With a mere mention of the name "Tuned Air," the stage lights blast on with memories of a Broadway show, joint performances with esteemed groups like Chor Leoni and the original musical Worksongs.

While a nucleus of the Tuned Air choir from the late '80s and '90s is certainly still there, the 31-member group audiences saw at ArtSpring on the weekend, under the direction of Cassandra Miller, is basically a new ensemble of islanders.

What remained the same in concerts held Friday and Saturday nights (and in Victoria Sunday afternoon) was a presentation of innovative material performed with conviction and joy.

It was the first full-length concert for the choir

in two years, and the debut of director Miller who has led the group since January.

As illuminated by the concert title, the songs decried political and social injustice, and war, and splashed seeds of hope into our consciousness.

From sizzling spirituals, the ultimate anti-war song (Waltzing Matilda) and echoes of past hopes and struggles, the evening poured a warm and reverential brew for the audience to savour. The result was undeniably stirring.

With barely time to take in the group — strikingly attired in bright-coloured tops and dark pants or skirts — after it first assembled on the risers, we inhaled the thrill of opening notes of the traditional Come By Here spiritual uttered by high school-aged vocalist Aubrey Zacharias.

The choir then added back-up which came off loose at times and tight at others. It was a cool effect.

Aubrey's father Don Zacharias brought everyone to their feet in mid-first half with his work in an emotional rendering of And the Band Played Waltzing Matilda, as arranged for baritone solo and choir by Miller.

In the fascinating Drinking Gourd song of the "underground railway" that brought Black slaves to Canada, the choir deftly handled elements such as a waterfall-like "follow" phrases and a mountain range of dynamics.

The choir's 12 men took charge with a spirited melody in Umam Uyjabala, with a confident Bo Curtis leading the way. Passages of singing to each other with relaxed posture came off well.

The concert's final piece, Asma Asmaton (Breath of Breaths), was simply spell-binding, with the sections alternating rolling triads and the beelining-to-heaven soprano voice of Tangle Caron.

Don Zacharias prefaced the song with translated lyrics about a woman who had gone to the Nazi's Jewish death camps. The passion of the words upped the voltage on an electrifying piece of music.

"We saw her in an icy square, with a number on her white arm, and a yellow star on her heart. How beautiful is my beloved, who was caressed by her mother and had kisses from her brother. No one knew she was so beautiful."

Special concert guests were the young Salt Spring Centre School Choir, which Miller has also directed since September, and accompanist Karen Arney.

The buoyant singers charmed the crowd with not only the uplifting

Freedom Song and Hebrew Al Shlosha songs they had learned, but with the sweet antics of its younger members. (On Saturday night that included Ella Fisher, age five, who couldn't suppress her urge to "groove," and six-year-old Linda Herbert, who ensured her bow after a stellar solo did not go unnoticed.)

Student Arlo Bryn-Thorn's explanation of Al Shlosha's point — that "the world is sustained by three things: truth, justice and peace" — elicited an audible response of understanding from the audience.

Accompanist Chris Kodaly's solo piano piece, the Brahms Intermezzo Opus 118 #2, wove itself beautifully into the tone of the whole concert.

The evening's flow and placement of pieces probably couldn't have been better.

Sometimes English

choirs have trouble making foreign languages ring true, but that was not the case with Tuned Air and the various African and Hebrew songs they tackled.

As I'm sure Miller and the choir members knew, a few entrances and endings in the largely a capella repertoire were not always crisply bang-on at the Saturday night performance I attended.

That may have been part of a general sense of tentativeness that dusted the evening.

I would have liked to hear more from director Miller — to get a better sense of her personality. Miller's introduction of the Asma Asmaton piece and her love for it was expressed with such eloquence I wanted her to keep talking, and wished she had spoken more before that point.

After the weekend's performance, I'm already looking forward to what Miller, accompanist Kodaly and the new Tuned Air choir will offer next.

Before you vote Consider the facts

Vacation Rentals in Perspective:

1. The number of vacation rentals on Salt Spring has been greatly exaggerated. The Islands Trust states there are 300 – 500 vacation rentals. Thorough research shows approximately 163 current operations.
2. Vacation rentals add $6,000,000 to Salt Spring's annual economy. This activity creates jobs for local people and supports island merchants and artisans. Using conservative estimates, research shows short term vacation rentals add $6,000,000 annually to the economy on Salt Spring Island (excluding return on investment to the owner).
3. Over 70% of vacation rental owners are island residents. Contrary to the contention of current Trustees (and candidate Ellie Thorburn) the vast majority of owners are full time residents. An additional 11% are part time residents of the island.
4. Vacation rentals have a low impact to Salt Spring's infrastructure. They are small-scale, neighborhood based guest accommodation. Visitors are distributed throughout the island where they can enjoy our rural life-style. The Trust's alternative of developing existing commercially zoned land could add up to 700 additional units. These would be high impact, high-density developments and would compete with existing accommodation providers.
5. Vacation rentals are environmentally sound. They do not place an added strain on our island's limited resources, water supply or cause damage to our natural environment. Vacation rentals utilize existing homes, which otherwise would stand empty. The alternative preferred by the Trustees - the construction of new resorts and hotels - will damage our neighbourhoods and our natural environment.
6. Shutting down vacation rental homes will not resolve our island's affordable housing crisis. Trustees Borrowman and Byron themselves have acknowledged in a recent Driftwood article: "It is true that many vacation rentals will never become part of the local residential pool, whether through rental or purchase. And high-cost homes will not convert to low-cost housing."
7. Vacation rentals do not compete with other guest accommodation. Different types of accommodation meet different visitor needs. Vacation rental homes attract visitors for longer periods of time, who seek relaxation in a private setting where they can cook meals, create their own daily rhythms and include their children and pets in an unhurried family vacation. During their stay, they also patronize Island restaurants, galleries and local merchants.
8. Beware of targeting non-residents. Salt Spring competes with many other vacation destinations for tourist dollars and draws visitors from the rest of Canada as well as other countries. Initial research suggests vacationers will go elsewhere if vacation homes are not available here. Furthermore, land ownership and taxation policy falls outside of the Trust's jurisdiction.

Get out and vote!

Please support candidates who are prepared to:

- Resolve conflict between local government and island members
- Place a moratorium on proactive bylaw enforcement, until the OCP can be revisited (scheduled for 2003)
- Address OCP update concerns - existing flaws and changing needs in the areas of:
Farming; water supply, quality and use; environment and tourism

Candidates who demonstrate an active concern over these issues are:

Eric Booth

Kimberly Lineger

Sheri Neilson

This ad submitted and paid for by the Association of Short Term Vacation Rentals (ASTAR). Information 537-5050.

Consider...

- Tourism is Salt Spring's only viable industry.
- The Trustees have ignored the economic impact of shutting down vacation rentals.
- False information circulated by Trustees Borrowman and Byron has generated conflict on the Island by setting neighbors against neighbors.
- Borrowman's proposal for legalizing vacation rentals through commercial zoning is detrimental to neighborhoods and will destroy our rural character.
- ASTAR members have unanimously approved self-regulation (adopted a set of Standards of Operations).
- ASTAR believes all complaints must be investigated by the Bylaw Office to determine legitimacy, and dealt with accordingly.

Please visit www.saltspring.org/astar for more details.

The Islands are for everyone,
not just current residents.
We must manage growth in a way that preserves them and the characteristics that make them attractive to residents and to visitors alike.

Miceli mines creativity with The Spaces Between

By GAIL SJUBERG
Staff Writer

Some artists need regular blasts of intensity to spur their creative output, but for Salt Spring classical guitarist Alan Miceli, creativity rises from a calm and centred place.

And when it comes to capturing expressions of that creativity, patience can lead to perfection.

Inspired by the "go-for-it" attitude of music producer Jordy Sharp, Miceli last month released his first CD of largely original classical and steel-string guitar compositions.

From start to finish, The Spaces Between is both technically and compositionally impeccable.

Miceli's pieces range from the achingly tender While You Were Sleeping, to the dramatic-to-moody Winter and the rhythmic Road Ahead.

The title cut spawns a sensation of alternating deep and minute thoughts swimming in and out of a quiet mind.

Miceli partly credits years of meditation practice with his songwriting success.

"Meditation or any kind of spiritual practice is a great way to unlock one's creativity," he maintains. "It's just a way of connecting with the creative place."

At his well-attended CD release party at ArtSpring last month, Miceli also put his audience through a five-minute meditation before beginning to play, which helped set both performer and audience in a relaxed mood.

While Miceli and Sharp felt a few uptempo songs were needed to help forge a "balanced" CD, they also didn't want to disrupt its calm demeanor.

"Even when I think I'm banging the hell out of the guitar people tell me it's very relaxing," he said.

Miceli's polished result is also not surprising when the care and sheer hard work he embraced is taken into account.

A project Miceli thought would occupy a few months of his life instead engulfed almost three times that amount.

"It was really a lesson in perseverance and patience," he reflected.

Miceli could literally not be released from each song until everything about it felt right.

Over and over he would review what had been recorded so far and see where some sculpting was needed.

"You go back and listen again [and see] what's not working, what is working."

He, Sharp and recording technician Andy Bowmer also had to contend with a trademark charm of his chosen instrument.

"One of the technical difficulties of the classical guitar is that it squeaks," he explained.

While the extraneous sounds could be eliminated by recording pieces in phrases, Miceli also used the steel-string guitar to record some compositions usually reserved for the nylon-string classical instrument.

Alan Miceli

When the colour reproduction of Shari Macdonald's tulip photo for the cover didn't emerge true to the original, he also felt it must be done again.

A similar kind of awareness led to his discovery that "the spaces between" the striking of strings may be as critical as the notes themselves. It came during a concert given by another classical guitarist at a concert in Victoria.

Two pieces by famous composers are also included on the CD. Recuerdos de la Alhambra is a gorgeous Francisco Tarrega guitar piece, which Miceli noted his parents loved.

Miceli also feels attachment to the Prelude of Bach's Cello Suite as transcribed by guitarist Andrés Segovia. ("Guitarists are great thieves," he notes. "We love to steal pieces written for other [instruments].")

As a student of the instrument he has been especially influenced by Christopher Parkening and Alex de Grassi.

He is also grateful to his teachers in the past in Ontario — Norbert Kraft — "one of the best in Canada" — and Dennis Macgreggor, who introduced him to the classical guitar.

Miceli began playing guitar in Sault Ste. Marie, and quickly found himself drawn to the classical style.

"This is really me," he said, referring to the CD music, "and it's always been that way."

Like all musicians, he said, one first has to establish a fine technique which comes from playing other composers' music.

"You have to begin by playing everyone else's music and then at some point you have to drop that and play what is coming out of you. No matter what, you really have to trust your own inner voice."

Miceli has lived on Salt Spring for the past five years, and works as a Roasting Co. pastry chef.

He feels the island's generous creative atmosphere made it easy to tackle a CD.

"People even donated their time because they were excited about the project."

In addition to Macdonald's photography, which Miceli describes as "wonderful," Pat Walker handled the graphic design.

Miceli is particularly grateful to producer Sharp.

"If it wasn't for him it wouldn't have happened."

"He said 'why don't you do a CD?'" recalls Miceli. "My immediate thought was 'what if I spend $5,000 and it turns out to be a disaster?'" He said, "what if it turns out to be great?"

The project didn't even end up ravaging his pocketbook to the degree expected, and it's safe to say it turned out "great."

The Spaces Between is available in Ganges at Blue Moon, Acoustic Planet, Music Emporium and Jill Louise Campbell's gallery, and online through salt-springmusic.com.

PRESENTED BY THE GULF ISLANDS COMMUNITY ARTS COUNCIL (250) 537-0899

Guild students take to the stage

Spring isn't coming early this year, but a musical event usually associated with that season is blooming at ArtSpring on November 17.

Salt Spring Music Guild student recitals have been held in the spring for the past few years, giving the mainly young musicians a taste of under-the-lights stage performance.

Sunday's concert — called A Celebration of Student Musicians — offers that opportunity again, but is also a fundraiser for a young musicians' scholarship fund.

As guild member Deb Toole explains, the scholarship funds would be used to help send students to music camps or take advantage of opportunities to further their studies.

Sunday's performers will play piano, saxophone, trumpet, flute, violin and sing.

"It runs the gambit from adult singing students to little wee tots doing their three-second piano pieces," said Toole.

The concert begins at 2 p.m.

The music guild is a group of musicians, teachers and anyone interested in furthering music education on Salt Spring.

Events like the Sunday recital serve a number of purposes, said Toole.

"It teaches a person how to prepare for performance," she said, noting that "music is a performing medium."

Playing for an audience "always raises the bar," she said. "A performer always gets better at preparing for something that makes them a bit uncomfortable."

Teachers, too, learn from hearing their colleagues' students play, said Toole.

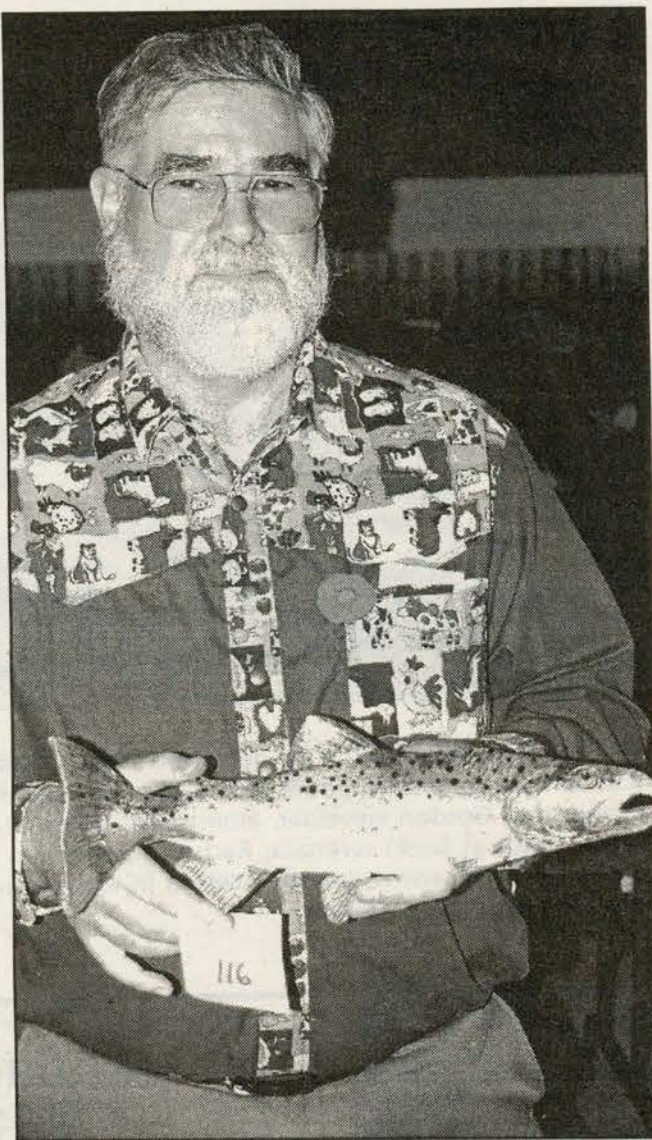

Audience members are asked to stay for the entire concert Sunday. (At previous student recitals, some families have left during intermission or after their children have finished playing their pieces.)

As event MC, Jennifer Howard will introduce the pieces with some interesting historical or related tidbits.

The afternoon will also feature door prizes for both audience members and participants, and a concession.

Admission is $5 for individuals or $12 for a family. Donations to the scholarship fund will also be welcomed.

LET'S EAT! WITH LINDA KOROSCIL

Orange Herbed Salmon Fillets

1 tsp. fresh rosemary, chopped
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. fresh sage, chopped
2 tsp. orange zest
1/2 c. fresh orange juice
4 salmon fillets
salt & pepper to taste

The ribbed grill is a wonderful invention. Used on your stove top, it creates a true barbecued flavour without having to face the outdoor elements at this time of year.

Marinate the fish in the sauce for 20 minutes. Remove fillets and grill until done. Meanwhile, bring marinade to a boil and simmer 5 minutes. Pour over fish on a beautiful platter. Garnish with fresh flowers and more sage leaves and rosemary sprigs. Be heart happy!

Art Now is back again

The Art Now exhibit held at Beaver Point in June was heralded as a "feast for the senses."

A new, fall version unfolds again this weekend, with more than 30 accomplished local artists exhibiting their latest works.

"The hall lends itself to the display of such a variety of media," said show co-organizer Jackie Walker.

Work by seven sculptors and three furniture builders will fill the large space, and lend context to the wall art, pottery, photography and weaving, she said.

Also featured are mosaics, lamps, flutes and wearable accessories.

Like the first Art Now show, fine chocolate and desserts will complement the visual treats, along with light dinners, brunches, soups, and hot and cool drinks.

Period live music is also on tap.

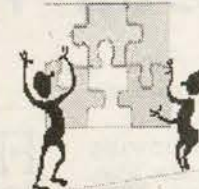

Art Now II opens Friday night at 6 p.m., and runs Saturday and Sunday beginning at 10:30 a.m.

The initial Art Now show was inspired by the life of Paul Hart, a renowned island woodworker and sculptor who died three years ago, and for whom the Hart Memorial Disc Golf Course is named.

Star Wars: better and worse

For a person my age, reviewing a Star Wars film objectively is practically impossible.

It may be burnt into my brain, but I'll give it the old college try. The 1999 Episode I: The Phantom Menace was pretty awful, though entertaining. This year's Episode II: Attack of the Clones is worse, and better.

I say worse primarily because the plot is utterly incomprehensible. Long gone is the simple good vs. evil universe of the first three films. Here we have at least three levels of bad guys, one of whom is actually the good guys in disguise. I won't even try to explain how.

A co-worker and I are

FLICK PICK WITH JASON TUDOR

actually considering putting together a flow-chart to try and figure out who's fooling with who — if anyone has one handy, please let me know.

"AOTC" is also bad because the dialogue is simply awful. This is somewhat of a problem with all of the Star Wars films ("get this walking carpet out of my way") but for some reason it really stands out here.

Worst is the romantic patter between brash young Anakin and Bambi-eyed Amidala. The settings — a grassy knoll, glowing fireplaces — certainly don't help.

What's better is the eye

candy, and it is here that Lucas has no peer. He just seems to know about angles, velocity, and light. We have no idea how a starship might move, but he is going to show us anyway. The first shot of the film is absolutely perfect: a triangular silver ship rolls gently down towards a planet, then drops through misty clouds to land gently as can be on a hovering platform. It's stunning stuff, and makes us wish with all my heart that Lucas could apply the same care to his characters.

By the end of AOTC there is a massive, incredibly intense battle. But without any connection to what's going on, we don't really care who wins.

Maybe by the time Episode III is being finished Lucas will have this figured this out, but I'm not sure he will. As Leia once said, "You're our only hope."

CHAMBER MUSIC: Brass performers from Gulf Islands Secondary School and Salt Spring Island Middle School (Daniel Miller, Charlotte Mellstrom, Jeff Cronin and Gordon Havelaar, along with music teachers Mitch Howard and Bruce Smith at back) serenade Rachel Jacobsen (in a Christmas With Scrooge costume) and Dawn Luker at etcetera in appreciation for two $500 cheques from the Ray Newman Fund.

Smart memoir, poetry highlighted at reading

Salt Spring's dry spell between literary readings is set to end with a downpour Saturday as Ontario author Carolyn Smart visits the island.

Smart

Smart is the guest for An Evening of Canadian Literature, which begins at 8 p.m. at All Saints Church.

The author of four poetry collections — Swimmers in Oblivion, Power Sources, Stoning the Moon and The Way to Come Home — Smart last year released her long-awaited memoir called At the End of the Day.

It explores the intense and turbulent relationship with her high-profile father, diplomat and economist Angus Smart.

As a Michigan State University Press summary notes, "She traverses the minefield of an intense and difficult relationship and emerges with a remarkable album of a complicated man who could both charm and infuriate, who was both loved and feared."

An initial sketch from At the End of The Day won the personal essay contest of the CBC Radio Literary Competition in 1994.

At the November 16 All Saints event, Smart will read from the memoir, and then delve into some poetry.

Smart is currently director of creative writing at Queen's University, and working on a new collection of poems with the working title of Unease. She and her family also have a large organic garden on their property north of Kingston.

Smart's work has been published in more than 100 magazines and anthologies, and translated into Spanish, German and Japanese.

Writing in The Ottawa Citizen, Gary Geddes described Smart's work as "startlingly beautiful poetry."

"Everything she writes glows," stated The London Free Press.

The Smart reading is sponsored by Theatre Alive!, Salt Spring Celebration of Canadian Writers and The Canada Council.

Admission is free, but donations are appreciated in order to defray costs.

Hands off the haggis!

Much may be made of a Scotchman — if he be caught young.

That smart-ass remark fell from the smirking lips of unrepentant anglophone Samuel Johnson about two and a half centuries ago.

The Old Lexicographer wasn't the first to casually slander the folks who dwell in Great Britain's attic — and he was hardly the last.

Indeed, where would the modern-day Lettermans and Lenos of the world be without that amiable ethnic punching bag known as The Scot?

We live in a time of hyper political correctness — woe betide the yuckster who essays a one-liner about Poles, Jews, Pakistanis, Irish or Indians — East, West or North American.

Jokes about Germans? Verboten. Bon mots about French Canadians? Quelle scandale! A Newfie joke can earn you a slap upside the earhole with a frozen cod — but a Scottish joke? Och, aye! Fire away, laddie!

When it comes to slapstick, broadsides and piercing wit, The Scot is the last safe national pinata. One can publicly poke fun at Auld Jock McLavish with impunity. It is perfectly acceptable, in mixed company, to laugh about Scots' legendary cheapness; to snicker about men in skirts; to roll the eyes about people who would attempt to pass off oatmeal as a national dish, plaid as a national costume and the bagpipes as a musical instrument.

That's alright. We Scots (I myself am descended from a long and venerable line of Lowland sheep molesters) are a doughty, resilient people. We were rolling with the punches long before that fat Sassenach Sam Johnson came along to give us a verbal cuff.

But this time, by the beard hairs of Macbeth's three Weird Sisters — this time they've gone too far.

They're attacking The Haggis.

Aye, The Haggis. "Grrrrreat chieftain o' the puddin' race" as Rabbie

WIT &
WHIMSY
WITH ARTHUR BLACK

Burns, the great chieftain of Scots poetry, so grandly dubbed it. Haggis — that culinary staple of Gaelic gastronomy, as traditional as neeps and tatties — has been declared unfit for human consumption.

It's the bloody Brits, as usual. The Food Standards Agency, a British government clutch of bumble-headed functionaries, has formally petitioned officials in the European Common Market to ban Haggis. Why? Because there is a "theoretical" risk that a person may contract Creutzfeldt-Jakob (mad-cow) disease from eating haggis.

Now, how is that possible, given that haggis doesn't have a scrap of beef in it? Haggis consists of oatmeal, suet, spices and the heart, lungs and liver of a, wait for it — lamb — all encased in a sheep's stomach casing.

Nonetheless, the Food Standards Agency insists that the sheep intestine casing of the haggis is perilous on the dinner plate because said sheep "may have" eaten the same tainted feed that spreads mad-cow disease in cattle — even though there has never been a reported case of any sheep carrying the cattle form of the disease.

What makes the charge even more ludicrous is the fact that the bureaucrats are not concerned about the haggis itself — just the casing it traditionally comes in. But traditionally, the casing isn't eaten — so where's the problem?

Answer: nowhere. In last Friday's edition of the Glasgow Daily Record a columnist by the name of Michael Christie crows: "The haggis has been saved from the hands of the Eurocrats."

Turns out that sheep stomach isn't covered by the European Common Market's lexicon of governable food commodities, so haggis gets off on a technicality.

I don't believe Scots were ever really worried. They recognized the threat for what it was — just another bout of the petty Anglo harassment of Scots that's been going on for centuries.

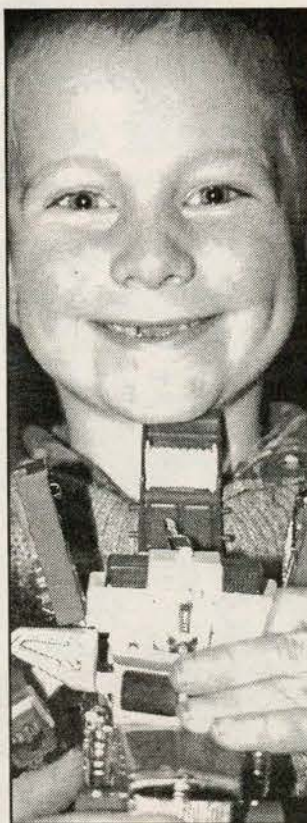

Puts me in mind of the time a Scot and an Englishman were out on a stroll, arguing as always, the merits of their two tribes, when they came across a magic lamp. Quick as a wink, Reginald picks it up and gives it a rub with the cuff of his tweed jacket. Sure enough, a genie swirls up before them.

It grants them each one wish. "I want a giant wall all around England, to keep these heathen Scots out forever," says the Englishman.

"It is done," says the genie as he turns to the Scot, "And your wish, sir?"

Jock asks for some details about this new wall. "It is 500 feet high," says the genie, "and 20 feet thick. Nothing can get in or out."

"Grrrand," says the Scot. "Now fill it with water."

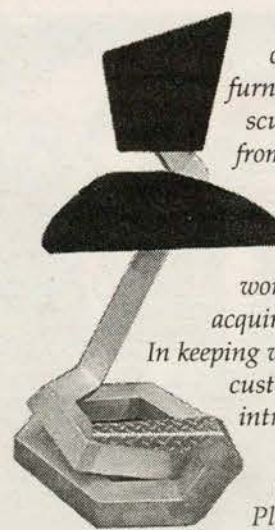

Aro Petit gives a big grin as he shows off a new transformer firetruck. The youngster was seen at an open house at Sandie Ferguson's Robinson Road home on Saturday.

Pastry chef takes top honours, benefit raises $375

• A local pastry chef who added Salt Spring ingredients to a grand mariner cheesecake won the peoples' choice award at a dessert competition last week.

Carley Makela, who works in the kitchen at Hastings House on Salt Spring, won the honour at the fourth annual Grand Marnier Dessert Challenge, held last Tuesday evening at the Delta Victoria Ocean Point Resort and Spa.

The competition — a Victoria Elder Care fundraiser — included various high-end chefs from around Vancouver Island.

Called Simple Grand Chevre Cheesecake, the dessert featured David Wood's goat cheese with a Grand Marnier sauce on the side.

The grand marnier was also included in the cheesecake, which Makela said she invented by pulling together pieces of various cheesecake recipes.

For her win, Makela took home several bottles of wine and a wine rack.

• A skatepark fundraiser held Hallowe'en night raised $375 — an amount that fell just short of the goal but which "was still not a failure by any means," said organizers.

The event, put together by Cassidy Turner and Last Minute Productions, aimed to raise $500 to fix aging ramps at the Kanaka Road skatepark.

Cassidy extended a huge thank-you to the many island businesses that sponsored the event as well as those who donated prizes.

"Last Minute Productions hopes that other community groups or individuals will continue to raise funds for the skatepark," said Cassidy in a note to the Driftwood.

• Island Star Video is sponsoring a showing of the Trading Places episode which featured the family of Lee and Marneé Beauvais and was filmed earlier this year. It will run at the Legion on Saturday, November 16, after the meat draw at about 7 p.m.

• Islanders might want to turn on the tube Thursday night, too, for The Spirit of Haida Gwaii. A CBC TV rendition of The Spirit Concert, a concert fundraiser for the Bill Reid Foundation, which was produced by Salt Spring's Bruce Ruddell, is on at 7 p.m. It's part of CBC's Opening Night series. Several Salt Spring Island singers were also on stage for the May 18 concert at the Chan Centre: Sally Bazzard, John Beardsell, Bo Curtis, Ragnhild Flakstad, Janet Hoag, Anne Millerd, Carolyn Mouat, Wendy Vine and Cathy Young.

SALT SPRING SNIPPETS

• A Salt Spring family of 4-H sisters came away with bundles of awards at an annual banquet last week.

Rebekah, Cherith and Sarah Davies, who belong to the Cedar District 4-H Club, were all selected from a field of over 100 members to receive special honours.

Rebekah Davies was awarded as the top first year member, and also received honours in the top junior showmanship category, top public speaker (club level) and second place public speaker (district level).

Cherith Davies took the top senior showmanship award, plus honours for the best ewe lamb, top yearling ewe, top Hampshire ewe, best record book and an attendance award.

Named the most dependable member, Sarah Davies also took the award as the top senior achiever and won an attendance award.

• An 84-year-old Galiano great-grandfather will share his winnings after picking up $42,560 from the British Columbia Lottery Association.

Jack Gillespie won $42,560 when his Lotto 6/49 ticket matched five numbers plus the bonus number in a late October draw.

According to a B.C. Lotto press release, Gillespie said that with three children, five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, the win "won't hurt at all. I'm going to spread it around, although they said 'spend it on yourself.' They are all just so pleased about it."

The winning ticket was purchased at Trincomali

Cafe Bakery & Deli on Galiano Island.

• Former Salt Spring resident Danny Evanishen is still looking for Ukrainian stories. Although his 10-year search for Canadian pioneers of Ukrainian descent is continuing, he is finding very few Ukrainian pioneers left.

Another project currently occupying Evanishen's time is his search for Ukrainian folk tales which he plans to collect into a series of books.

"I have several stories that are not found in any written collection," Evanishen says in a newsletter.

Evanishen can be reached at 250-494-3205 or by e-mail at: danny@ethnic.bc.ca.

• Both FC Division 2 and Division 6 men's teams are in elite ranks this year in the Vancouver Island Soccer League (VISL). FC manager

Ken Marr reports the Salt Spring squads are two of only eight undefeated teams to date among the roughly 60 teams in the six open divisions of the VISL (not including U-21 and over 35).

• Three spa resorts in British Columbia enjoy international renown, judging from a visit this past week by a delegation from Norway.

The six visitors spent two days at Salt Springs Spa Resort on North Beach Road, where they studied Jim Loiselle's operation with keen interest.

They were here to see how other spas operate before they open their own on a 6,000-acre farm that has been turned into a wilderness retreat in Norway. Their itinerary included stays at spas in Harrison and the Cariboo.

6 DEATHS

BURCH, Ronald Murray, passed away on November 4, 2002, with his family by his side in Lady Minto Hospital. Ron was born in Vancouver on August 13, 1944, where he ran a successful plumbing business. Ron had a life-long passion for the outdoors and enjoyed fishing and hunting. Ron was devoted to his family and friends. He will be forever loved and missed by his companion Flo Beaumont (Jason, Justin), his daughter Suzanne Archer (Andrew), his son Ryan (Chelsea), his father Del (Pat) of Abbotsford, his brother Brian (Trish) of Cranbrook, his Uncle Barrie (May) of Calgary, his grandchildren Austin and Colton Archer and his former wife Judy. His many friends and clients will remember his kindness and generosity. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Lady Minto Hospital or the research department of the Cancer Society. An open house will be held on Friday, November 15, 2002, at 140 Cormorant Crescent from 2pm to 6pm.

WILKINSON, Frank Cameron, died November 8, 2002 at home in Vancouver surrounded by his family and his Scottie dog, "Jessie". He was born May 2, 1928. He was a director of several major corporations, was active in numerous community organizations and was an Honorary life member of the Vancouver Playhouse and a Founding Director of Garibaldi Lifts Ltd., the original developers of the Whistler Mountain ski area. For many years Cam enjoyed his place on Salt Spring Island where he first lived at age 5. Service at St. Mary's Kersisdale (37th and Larch) Friday November 15, 3:00 pm. Special thanks to his caregiver Vicky Hernandez and to the Palliative Care Team.

I FEEL so much gratitude to those persons who so generously helped me and my father through the last weeks of his life. The gentle support I felt from you all touched me so deeply. From friends who were there for me to Dr. Alsberg, Dr. Crossland and the nurses who helped us all. Dad, Zoltan Szabo, died peacefully surrounded by family in the comfort of our home. Thank you from Reayane Kanne and family.

Wilderness 'pioneer' gives slide

A talk and slide show given by an extraordinary modern-day pioneer comes to Lions Hall next Thursday night.

Chris Czjakowski (pronounced like the composer Tchaikovsky) became familiar to Morningside radio show listeners in the 1980s with her letters to Peter Gzowski.

They detailed her experiences of building a log house 27 miles from the nearest road in the Coast Range near Bella Coola.

The November 21 slide show and talk begins at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $6.

Czjakowski has written two books about her life and observations in the B.C. wilderness: Cabin at Singing River and Diary of a Wilderness Dweller.

Cabin at Singing River chronicles the creation of her first home, as Morningside listeners may recall.

Diary of a Wilderness Dweller reveals adventures from building a second cabin, situated 20 miles from a road on a high-altitude, fly-in lake.

"Living at such an altitude and so far from a road gives Chris a unique opportunity to study the wildlife in an area which has had so little documentation that much of it remains unnamed," states publicity material.

In addition to writing and giving slide shows, Czjakowski also takes artists and naturalists on backpacking trips in the mountains around her home.

Make your final appeal — why should readers select you as a Survivor? How much whining and snivelling is allowed here? I'm a good sport! I did my share!! I cooked and fed them!! I taught them golf!! I didn't get grumpy!! My scholarship fund needs the cash! The rescue boat is in sight. What will you leave behind on this deserted island, as a symbol that you were here? Nothing - I'll know I was there and that's enough for me!

SID FILKOW

THIRD VOTED OFF!

Hard to believe that with 3 castaways voted off the island, two are "The Geezers"! The latest to go is Sid Filkow, comments from the voting public included "Sid's lost his sense of humour and his chance to survive!", "Your answers aren't your usual wit. Sid, you're so off this island!", and "Eeny, Meeny, Miney, Mo."

So now the North moves ahead of the South 3 to 2! Vote soon by clipping the ballot on this page and leave in the ballot box at any of the participating Survivor businesses. Remember one ballot per week, per reader. Extra ballots in stores! The last castaway wins $500 for their favorite charity! One lucky reader wins accommodations in Victoria!

MAGGIE MACWARBEY

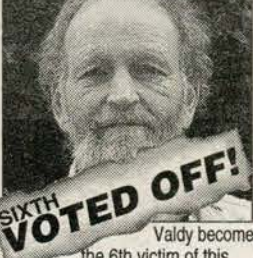

FIRST VOTED OFF!

Alas, Maggie MacWarbey that playful Siren from the south end becomes the first to be cast off of beautiful Salt Spring Island. First-cousin to Arvid Chalmers (see the resemblance?) Maggie was in a virtual dead heat with Dave Philips & finished only 1 vote ahead. Tribal Council re-counted 3 times, to no avail.

Comments from the voters who voted Maggie off included: "Eliminate this beauty & make room for other babes on the beach.", "She can't be for real", "Bad Disguise", "Nice, but who likes ironing as a hobby?" Remember to clip out the ballot on this page & vote off the castaway of your choice at any of the participating Survivor businesses. Remember 1 ballot per week, per reader. Extra ballots in stores! The last castaway wins $500 for their favorite charity!

SIXTH VOTED OFF!

Valdy becomes the 6th victim of this North-South stand-off!

Comments from the voters who voted Valdy off included: "Sorry Valdy...love ya but you live on the wrong side!", "Singing the blues honey?", "Time to move on...leave on a good note". It is now down to the bitter end. This will be your last chance to cast a vote & determine who "reigns" on Salt Spring. Remember to clip out the ballot on this page & vote off the castaway of your choice at any of the participating Survivor businesses. Remember 1 ballot per week, per reader. Extra ballots in stores! Island 'elves' launch annual Santa's Workshop

Though the stunning autumn weather might still be luring tropical birds into the area and coaxing exotic flowers out of bloom, Christmas is only a sleigh-bell's tinkling away.

Community-minded individuals are already dusting off their elf caps in preparation for the work ahead.

The local organization Santa's Workshop is ready to accept donations of new and gently used toys to help families with tight budgets provide Christmas presents for children each year.

"We get a tremendous satisfaction out of doing it," said chief elf Judy Willett.

Along with "Santa" Bob Appleton and a tinker's toolbox full of other helpers, the two have been working to provide Christmas toys to children for many years.

"We concentrate on the age group of true believers," Appleton said. "These days I think that goes from age four to age four and a half," he laughed.

Appleton was first recruited to help out with the project through Community Services by Santa's Workshop founder Carol Simpson 14 years ago.

Simpson started the project in 1987 with the aim of finding homes for refurbished toys.

"One day she was cleaning out her toy cupboard prior to Christmas and she was about to dump out some high-quality toys. It occurred to her that she could give these toys to others," he said.

When Simpson needed to hand over the reins, Appleton didn't hesitate to say, "Yes." Two years later, Willett joined Appleton in the workshop.

With community support, they've provided toys to 60-70 families each year. And sometimes there are four to five children in a family, Appleton said.

The Santa's Workshop team has also been assisted by a number of other elves who wash toys, make doll clothing and sort donated gifts for the age and gender of recipient children.

Events such as the Salt Spring Toy Run, conducted by local motorcycle riders, and the liquor store donation program have also provided the workshop with many lovely toys that will help supply the need for island families.

"At one time the Golden Hands ladies used to make doll's clothes," Willett said.

But the group of women who made miraculous doll restorations have been increasingly less active in recent years due to advancing age, she said.

Children's interests in toys have also shifted away from dolls, Willett said.

"We've found over the years that tastes have changed. Girls that used to play with dolls play with Barbies," said Appleton.

"My grandchildren, all they do is play with com-

"We used to get Viewmasters but they're passé now," Appleton chuckled.

In recent years the elves have had the best successes with lightly used toys such as stuffed animals, plastic dinosaurs, farm sets, toy trucks and unmarked books.

Among new donations, gift certificates for movies are quite popular and the workshop can always use more batteries.

"I can't play with the toys if they don't have batteries," Appleton said.

Clothing donations have proven to be tricky, he said. "A six-year-old can come in 14 different sizes."

For benefactors who would like a little more guidance, the Angel Tree program at the CIBC bank allows patrons to select a tag with the age and gender of a child that is hoping for gifts.

Donated toys can then be dropped off in marked boxes at the CIBC, Mouat's, Ganges Village Market, the Salt Spring Waterworks office or either branch of Pharmasave.

Pre-wrapped toys are gratefully appreciated but they should be labelled for the age and gender to help volunteers.

This year Gulf Islands Secondary Student Brittany Grundy will be organizing a team of high-school girls to help families collect their presents at the Community Centre on December 16-18.

The deadline for donations is December 15.

Wilderness 'pioneer' gives slide

A talk and slide show given by an extraordinary modern-day pioneer comes to Lions Hall next Thursday night.

Chris Czjakowski (pronounced like the composer Tchaikovsky) became familiar to Morningside radio show listeners in the 1980s with her letters to Peter Gzowski.

They detailed her experiences of building a log house 27 miles from the nearest road in the Coast Range near Bella Coola.

The November 21 slide show and talk begins at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $6.

Czjakowski has written two books about her life and observations in the B.C. wilderness: Cabin at Singing River and Diary of a Wilderness Dweller.

Cabin at Singing River chronicles the creation of her first home, as Morningside listeners may recall.

Diary of a Wilderness Dweller reveals adventures from building a second cabin, situated 20 miles from a road on a high-altitude, fly-in lake.

"Living at such an altitude and so far from a road gives Chris a unique opportunity to study the wildlife in an area which has had so little documentation that much of it remains unnamed," states publicity material.

In addition to writing and giving slide shows, Czjakowski also takes artists and naturalists on backpacking trips in the mountains around her home.

Make your final appeal — why should readers select you as a Survivor? How much whining and snivelling is allowed here? I'm a good sport! I did my share!! I cooked and fed them!! I taught them golf!! I didn't get grumpy!! My scholarship fund needs the cash!
The rescue boat is in sight. What will you leave behind on this deserted island, as a symbol that you were here? Nothing - I'll know I was there and that's enough for me!

SID FILKOW

THIRD VOTED OFF!

Hard to believe that with 3 castaways voted off the island, two are "The Geezers"! The latest to go is Sid Filkow, comments from the voting public included "Sid's lost his sense of humour and his chance to survive!", "Your answers aren't your usual wit. Sid, you're so off this island!", and "Eeny, Meeny, Miney, Mo."

So now the North moves ahead of the South 3 to 2! Vote soon by clipping the ballot on this page and leave in the ballot box at any of the participating Survivor businesses. MAGGIE MACWARBEY

FIRST VOTED OFF!

Alas, Maggie MacWarbey that playful Siren from the south end becomes the first to be cast off of beautiful Salt Spring Island. First-cousin to Arvid Chalmers (see the resemblance?) Maggie was in a virtual dead heat with Dave Philips & finished only 1 vote ahead. Tribal Council re-counted 3 times, to no avail.

Comments from the voters who voted Maggie off included: "Eliminate this beauty & make room for other babes on the beach.", "She can't be for real", "Bad Disguise", "Nice, but who likes ironing as a hobby?" Remember to clip out the ballot on this page & vote off the castaway of your choice at any of the participating Survivor businesses. Remember 1 ballot per week, per reader. Extra ballots in stores! SIXTH VOTED OFF!

Valdy becomes the 6th victim of this North-South stand-off!

Comments from the voters who voted Valdy off included: "Sorry Valdy...love ya but you live on the wrong side!", "Singing the blues honey?", "Time to move on...leave on a good note".

It is now down to the bitter end. This will be your last chance to cast a vote & determine who "reigns" on Salt Spring. BURCH, Ronald Murray, passed away on November 4, 2002, with his family by his side in Lady Minto Hospital. Ron was born in Vancouver on August 13, 1944, where he ran a successful plumbing business. Ron had a life-long passion for the outdoors and enjoyed fishing and hunting. Ron was devoted to his family and friends. He will be forever loved and missed by his companion Flo Beaumont (Jason, Justin), his daughter Suzanne Archer (Andrew), his son Ryan (Chelsea), his father Del (Pat) of Abbotsford, his brother Brian (Trish) of Cranbrook, his Uncle Barrie (May) of Calgary, his grandchildren Austin and Colton Archer and his former wife Judy. His many friends and clients will remember his kindness and generosity. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Lady Minto Hospital or the research department of the Cancer Society. An open house will be held on Friday, November 15, 2002, at 140 Cormorant Crescent from 2pm to 6pm.

WILKINSON, Frank Cameron, died November 8, 2002 at home in Vancouver surrounded by his family and his Scottie dog, "Jessie". He was born May 2, 1928. He is survived by his wife, Terry, son Graeme, daughters Marion Wilkinson and Ginny Love, son-in-law Gordon Love, grandchildren Hamish, Cameron, Duncan and Maggie Love. Cam was educated at St. George's School, Kelowna High School, U.B.C. and the London School of Economics. He served his family company, Wilkinson Steel and Metals for 40 years, the last 25 as Chairman and C.E.O. He was a director of several major corporations, was active in numerous community organizations and was an Honorary life member of the Vancouver Playhouse and a Founding Director of Garibaldi Lifts Ltd., the original developers of the Whistler Mountain ski area. For many years Cam enjoyed his place on Salt Spring Island where he first lived at age 5. Service at St. Mary's Kersisdale (37th and Larch) Friday November 15, 3:00 pm. Donations to the Pacific Parkinson's Research Institute, #201-1095 West Pender St., Vancouver, BC, V6E 2M6 or British Columbia SPCA. Special thanks to his caregiver Vicky Hernandez and to the Palliative Care Team.

I FEEL so much gratitude to those persons who so generously helped me and my father through the last weeks of his life. The gentle support I felt from you all touched me so deeply. From friends who were there for me to Dr. Alsberg, Dr. Crossland and the nurses who helped us all. Dad, Zoltan Szabo, died peacefully surrounded by family in the comfort of our home. Thank you from Reayane Kanne and family.

Pastry chef takes top honours, benefit raises $375

• A local pastry chef who added Salt Spring ingredients to a grand mariner cheesecake won the peoples' choice award at a dessert competition last week.

Carley Makela, who works in the kitchen at Hastings House on Salt Spring, won the honour at the fourth annual Grand Marnier Dessert Challenge, held last Tuesday evening at the Delta Victoria Ocean Point Resort and Spa.

The competition — a Victoria Elder Care fundraiser — included various high-end chefs from around Vancouver Island.

Called Simple Grand Chevre Cheesecake, the dessert featured David Wood's goat cheese with a Grand Marnier sauce on the side.

The grand marnier was also included in the cheesecake, which Makela said she invented by pulling together pieces of various cheesecake recipes.

For her win, Makela took home several bottles of wine and a wine rack.

• A skatepark fundraiser held Hallowe'en night raised $375 — an amount that fell just short of the goal but which "was still not a failure by any means," said organizers.

The event, put together by Cassidy Turner and Last Minute Productions, aimed to raise $500 to fix aging ramps at the Kanaka Road skatepark.

Cassidy extended a huge thank-you to the many island businesses that sponsored the event as well as those who donated prizes.

"Last Minute Productions hopes that other community groups or individuals will continue to raise funds for the skatepark," said Cassidy in a note to the Driftwood.

• Island Star Video is sponsoring a showing of the Trading Places episode which featured the family of Lee and Marneé Beauvais and was filmed earlier this year. It will run at the Legion on Saturday, November 16, after the meat draw at about 7 p.m.

• Islanders might want to turn on the tube Thursday night, too, for The Spirit of Haida Gwaii. A CBC TV rendition of The Spirit Concert, a concert fundraiser for the Bill Reid Foundation, which was produced by Salt Spring's Bruce Ruddell, is on at 7 p.m. It's part of CBC's Opening Night series. Several Salt Spring Island singers were also on stage for the May 18 concert at the Chan Centre: Sally Bazzard, John Beardsell, Bo Curtis, Ragnhild Flakstad, Janet Hoag, Anne Millerd, Carolyn Mouat, Wendy Vine and Cathy Young.

• A Salt Spring family of 4-H sisters came away with bundles of awards at an annual banquet last week.

Rebekah, Cherith and Sarah Davies, who belong to the Cedar District 4-H Club, were all selected from a field of over 100 members to receive special honours.

Rebekah Davies was awarded as the top first year member, and also received honours in the top junior showmanship category, top public speaker (club level) and second place public speaker (district level).

Cherith Davies took the top senior showmanship award, plus honours for the best ewe lamb, top yearling ewe, top Hampshire ewe, best record book and an attendance award.

Named the most dependable member, Sarah Davies also took the award as the top senior achiever and won an attendance award.

• An 84-year-old Galiano great-grandfather will share his winnings after picking up $42,560 from the British Columbia Lottery Association.

Jack Gillespie won $42,560 when his Lotto 6/49 ticket matched five numbers plus the bonus number in a late October draw.

According to a B.C. Lotto press release, Gillespie said that with three children, five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, the win "won't hurt at all. I'm going to spread it around, although they said 'spend it on yourself.' They are all just so pleased about it."

The winning ticket was purchased at Trincomali

Cafe Bakery & Deli on Galiano Island.

• Former Salt Spring resident Danny Evanishen is still looking for Ukrainian stories. Although his 10-year search for Canadian pioneers of Ukrainian descent is continuing, he is finding very few Ukrainian pioneers left.

Another project currently occupying Evanishen's time is his search for Ukrainian folk tales which he plans to collect into a series of books.

"I have several stories that are not found in any written collection," Evanishen says in a newsletter.

Evanishen can be reached at 250-494-3205 or by e-mail at: danny@ethnic.bc.ca.

• Both FC Division 2 and Division 6 men's teams are in elite ranks this year in the Vancouver Island Soccer League (VISL). FC manager

Ken Marr reports the Salt Spring squads are two of only eight undefeated teams to date among the roughly 60 teams in the six open divisions of the VISL (not including U-21 and over 35).

• Three spa resorts in British Columbia enjoy international renown, judging from a visit this past week by a delegation from Norway.

The six visitors spent two days at Salt Springs Spa Resort on North Beach Road, where they studied Jim Loiselle's operation with keen interest.

They were here to see how other spas operate before they open their own on a 6,000-acre farm that has been turned into a wilderness retreat in Norway. Their itinerary included stays at spas in Harrison and the Cariboo.

Dead equipment can't save lives.

The monitoring system is the heart of cardiac care.

Sadly, our cardiac monitoring system is over 10 years old, and we can no longer maintain or repair it because of its age and condition.

Our failing monitoring system puts the lives of cardiac patients, who must be monitored closely 24 hours a day, at risk.

We need your help. We must raise $350,000 to purchase a modern cardiac monitoring system to replace the antiquated one our staff struggles with every day. Your gift will help us give every patient the care they need when they need it most.

A window into the hell of war

By PETER HAASE

Special to the Driftwood

When I was born in Liverpool in 1950, the fourth of four sons, my father Albert was 54 years old.

He was a man of many life experiences. My dad was not overseas during the Second World War, he was a captain fireman in what was called the Air Raid Precautions (ARP). His duty during the air raids on Liverpool was an overwhelming task because of the bombed and burning houses and streets, and rescuing people unlucky enough to not make it to the shelters in time.

During this time, from 1939 to 1945, he was awarded various medals for his bravery in saving lives and securing dangerous situations. He spoke tearfully to us lads about the loss of life, young and old, that he had to deal with sometimes day after day.

Tragedy of war was not a new thing for him because back in 1914, at the age of 18 (underaged as many sign-ups were), he enlisted for the First World War with three of his brothers. After three months training he was sent to France and very soon found himself in what might be described as a landscape of thousands of young boys becoming men very quickly. Albert served with the light horse/heavy artillery division. (You may have seen those pictures of three pairs of horses with a rider on one side of each pair pulling a cannon). These guns fired 60-pound shells and I remember him flexing his big biceps in his 70s and bragging about "four years of moving 60-pounders."

As young boys we would keep bugging him to tell us about those war years on the western front and Egypt. His reply was always that the things he experienced in those four years of hell should not be told to the young. Later, as we were a little older and more insistent, he finally started to open up with his incredible stories of his time in the Great War.

He served at Ypres, the Marne, and was badly wounded with shrapnel at the battle of the Somme, where he also lost his brother just a short distance from his post. He was sent back to England and then to convalesce in Egypt with many other wounded and then back to the action before the closing of the war in 11-11.

On one occasion the captain of his troop was shot in the head by a sniper as they sat shoulder to shoulder on a log to have a smoke. My dad spoke very sadly of life in the trenches. The dismembered bodies everywhere, the rats, the overwhelming stench of death. The unbearable screaming of the injured unable to get first aid relief due to snipers. The howling of the hundreds of dogs (which were used in the trenches for things such as delivering messages in dangerous places). The cries of the injured horses badly cut up from shell fire, the dehumanization of what used to be happy young English, Scottish and Welsh lads. The rum that was handed out to the boys (yes, boys) to keep their courage up in the face of death.

There was the occasional suicide in the lines and also once in a while a firing squad for deserters. The unforgiving winters where everything was covered in mud and ice, the sanitary conditions were unbearable and the food always questionable. All in the name of what? Greed, power and fear.

After the war, Albert received 96 English pounds for his four-year service in the army, went to sea in the merchant marine as most Liverpool boys do and later became a professional soccer player.

Like thousands of other disillusioned returning soldiers, he sold his medals for a few pounds, knowing fully well that politics and honesty never go together. Later in 1966, when he was 70 years old, we as a family all immigrated to Australia. At 88 years old, after sending a letter to the Queen, he received all his medals, gold and silver, in perfect duplication from the British War Office.

Most soldiers, even today, come from poor of working class backgrounds. I wonder why? I suggest those who thirst for war — the politicians, the war industrialists, the Hollywood film producers that glibly push war movies for profit, the oil barons, the CEOs of the finance world that foot the bills for weapons — all these people should be the first in line with their children and grandchildren if they want war so much.

The old saying that "the first casualty of war is truth" is not completely correct. The lies from both sides start up way before the war. War has no winners if it only has profit makers.

Terrorists come in all shapes and sizes. In fact, some really bad ones are clean shaven and wear three-piece suits — go figure. By the way, which country has the largest stockpile of weapons of mass destruction? Will the UN send their inspectors into that country and demand removal of such and a reversal of policy? I doubt it.

Most people already know who runs the world. As long as politically uneducated people swallow the lies and follow misguided religious rhetoric — whether eastern or western — we will continue to send young men and women into wars while the rich send their young to the finest universities.

Hands off the haggis!

Much may be made of a Scotchman — if he be caught young.

That smart-ass remark fell from the smirking lips of unrepentant anglophone Samuel Johnson about two and a half centuries ago.

The Old Lexicographer wasn't the first to casually slander the folks who dwell in Great Britain's attic — and he was hardly the last.

Indeed, where would the modern-day Lettermans and Lenos of the world be without that amiable ethnic punching bag known as The Scot?

We live in a time of hyper political correctness — woe betide the yuckster who essays a one-liner about Poles, Jews, Pakistanis, Irish or Indians — East, West or North American.

Jokes about Germans? Verboten. Bon mots about French Canadians? Quelle scandale! A Newfie joke can earn you a slap upside the earhole with a frozen cod — but a Scottish joke? Och, aye! Fire away, laddie!

When it comes to slapstick, broadsides and piercing wit, The Scot is the last safe national pinata. One can publicly poke fun at Auld Jock McLavish with impunity. It is perfectly acceptable, in mixed company, to laugh about Scots' legendary cheapness; to snicker about men in skirts; to roll the eyes about people who would attempt to pass off oatmeal as a national dish, plaid as a national costume and the bagpipes as a musical instrument.

That's alright. We Scots (I myself am descended from a long and venerable line of Lowland sheep molesters) are a doughty, resilient people. We were rolling with the punches long before that fat Sassenach Sam Johnson came along to give us a verbal cuff.

But this time, by the beard hairs of Macbeth's three Weird Sisters — this time they've gone too far.

They're attacking The Haggis.

Aye, The Haggis. "Grrrrreat chieftain o' the puddin' race" as Rabbie

WIT &
WHIMSY
WITH ARTHUR BLACK

Burns, the great chieftain of Scots poetry, so grandly dubbed it. Haggis — that culinary staple of Gaelic gastronomy, as traditional as neeps and tatties — has been declared unfit for human consumption.

It's the bloody Brits, as usual. The Food Standards Agency, a British government clutch of bumble-headed functionaries, has formally petitioned officials in the European Common Market to ban Haggis. Why? Because there is a "theoretical" risk that a person may contract Creutzfeldt-Jakob (mad-cow) disease from eating haggis.

Now, how is that possible, given that haggis doesn't have a scrap of beef in it? Haggis consists of oatmeal, suet, spices and the heart, lungs and liver of a, wait for it — lamb — all encased in a sheep's stomach casing.

Nonetheless, the Food Standards Agency insists that the sheep intestine casing of the haggis is perilous on the dinner plate because said sheep "may have" eaten the same tainted feed that spreads mad-cow disease in cattle — even though there has never been a reported case of any sheep carrying the cattle form of the disease.

What makes the charge even more ludicrous is the fact that the bureaucrats are not concerned about the haggis itself — just the casing it traditionally comes in. But traditionally, the casing isn't eaten — so where's the problem?

Answer: nowhere. In last Friday's edition of the Glasgow Daily Record a columnist by the name of Michael Christie crows: "The haggis has been saved from the hands of the Eurocrats."

Turns out that sheep stomach isn't covered by the European Common Market's lexicon of governable food commodities, so haggis gets off on a technicality.

I don't believe Scots were ever really worried. They recognized the threat for what it was — just another bout of the petty Anglo harassment of Scots that's been going on for centuries.

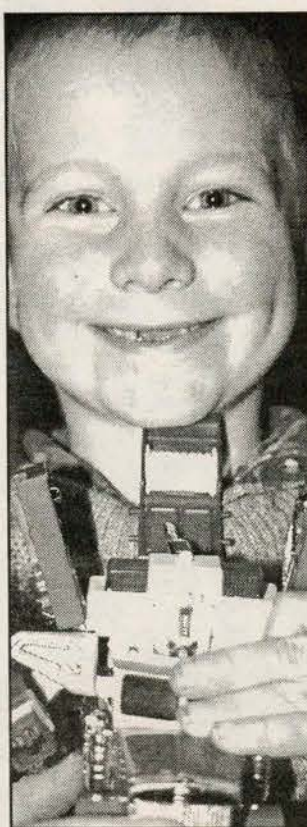

Puts me in mind of the time a Scot and an Englishman were out on a stroll, arguing as always, the merits of their two tribes, when they came across a magic lamp. Quick as a wink, Reginald picks it up and gives it a rub with the cuff of his tweed jacket. Sure enough, a genie swirls up before them.

It grants them each one wish. "I want a giant wall all around England, to keep these heathen Scots out forever," says the Englishman.

"It is done," says the genie as he turns to the Scot, "And your wish, sir?"

Jock asks for some details about this new wall. "It is 500 feet high," says the genie, "and 20 feet thick. Nothing can get in or out."

"Grrrand," says the Scot. "Now fill it with water."

Aro Petit gives a big grin as he shows off a new transformer firetruck. The youngster was seen at an open house at Sandie Ferguson's Robinson Road home on Saturday.

YOUR WEEKLY PULL-OUT TV GUIDE

Star Wars: better and worse

For a person my age, reviewing a Star Wars film objectively is practically impossible.

It may be burnt into my brain, but I'll give it the old college try. The 1999 Episode I: The Phantom Menace was pretty awful, though entertaining. This year's Episode II: Attack of the Clones is worse, and better.

I say worse primarily because the plot is utterly incomprehensible. Long gone is the simple good vs. evil universe of the first three films. Here we have at least three levels of bad guys, one of whom is actually the good guys in disguise. I won't even try to explain how.

A co-worker and I are

actually considering putting together a flow-chart to try and figure out who's fooling with who — if anyone has one handy, please let me know.

"AOTC" is also bad because the dialogue is simply awful. This is somewhat of a problem with all of the Star Wars films ("get this walking carpet out of my way") but for some reason it really stands out here.

Worst is the romantic patter between brash young Anakin and Bambi-eyed Amidala. The settings — a grassy knoll, glowing fireplaces — certainly don't help.

What's better is the eye

candy, and it is here that Lucas has no peer. He just seems to know about angles, velocity, and light. We have no idea how a starship might move, but he is going to show us anyway. The first shot of the film is absolutely perfect: a triangular silver ship rolls gently down towards a planet, then drops through misty clouds to land gently as can be on a hovering platform. It's stunning stuff, and makes me wish with all my heart that Lucas could apply the same care to his characters.

By the end of AOTC there is a massive, incredibly intense battle. But without any connection to what's going on, we don't really care who wins.

Maybe by the time Episode III is being finished Lucas will have this figured this out, but I'm not sure he will. As Leia once said, "You're our only hope."

Smart memoir, poetry highlighted at reading

Salt Spring's dry spell between literary readings is set to end with a downpour Saturday as Ontario author Carolyn Smart visits the island.

Smart

Smart is the guest for An Evening of Canadian Literature, which begins at 8 p.m. at All Saints Church.

The author of four poetry collections — Swimmers in Oblivion, Power Sources, Stoning the Moon and The Way to Come Home — Smart last year released her long-awaited memoir called At the End of the Day.

It explores the intense and turbulent relationship with her high-profile father, diplomat and economist Angus Smart.

As a Michigan State University Press summary notes, "She traverses the minefield of an intense and difficult relationship and emerges with a remarkable album of a complicated man who could both charm and infuriate, who was both loved and feared."

An initial sketch from At the End of The Day won the personal essay contest of the CBC Radio Literary Competition in 1994.

At the November 16 All Saints event, Smart will read from the memoir, and then delve into some poetry.

Smart is currently director of creative writing at Queen's University, and working on a new collection of poems with the working title of Unease. She and her family also have a large organic garden on their property north of Kingston.

Smart's work has been published in more than 100 magazines and anthologies, and translated into Spanish, German and Japanese.

Writing in The Ottawa Citizen, Gary Geddes described Smart's work as "startlingly beautiful poetry."

"Everything she writes glows," stated The London Free Press.

The Smart reading is sponsored by Theatre Alive!, Salt Spring Celebration of Canadian Writers and The Canada Council.

Admission is free, but donations are appreciated in order to defray costs.

Guild students take to the stage

Spring isn't coming early this year, but a musical event usually associated with that season is blooming at ArtSpring on November 17.

Salt Spring Music Guild student recitals have been held in the spring for the past few years, giving the mainly young musicians a taste of under-the-lights stage performance.

Sunday's concert — called A Celebration of Student Musicians — offers that opportunity again, but is also a fundraiser for a young musicians' scholarship fund.

As guild member Deb Toole explains, the scholarship funds would be used to help send students to music camps or take advantage of opportunities to further their studies.

Sunday's performers will play piano, saxophone, trumpet, flute, violin and sing.

"It runs the gambit from adult singing students to little wee tots doing their three-second piano pieces," said Toole.

The concert begins at 2 p.m.

The music guild is a group of musicians, teachers and anyone interested in furthering music education on Salt Spring.

Events like the Sunday recital serve a number of purposes, said Toole.

"It teaches a person how to prepare for performance," she said, noting that "music is a performing medium."

Playing for an audience "always raises the bar," she said. "A performer always gets better at preparing for something that makes them a bit uncomfortable."

Teachers, too, learn from hearing their colleagues' students play, said Toole.

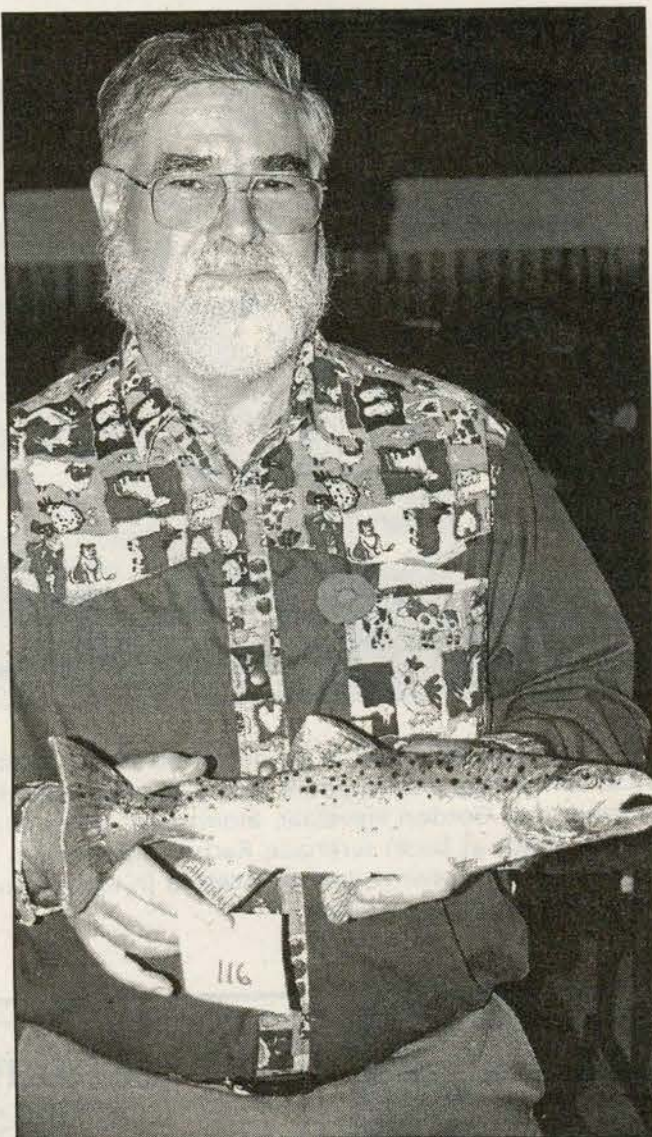

Audience members are asked to stay for the entire concert Sunday. (At previous student recitals, some families have left during intermission or after their children have finished playing their pieces.)

As event MC, Jennifer Howard will introduce the pieces with some interesting historical or related tidbits.

The afternoon will also feature door prizes for both audience members and participants, and a concession.

Admission is $5 for individuals or $12 for a family. Donations to the scholarship fund will also be welcomed.

The ribbed grill is a wonderful invention. Used on your stove top, it creates a true barbecued flavour without having to face the outdoor elements at this time of year.

Marinate the fish in the sauce for 20 minutes. Remove fillets and grill until done. Meanwhile, bring marinade to a boil and simmer 5 minutes. Pour over fish on a beautiful platter. Garnish with fresh flowers and more sage leaves and rosemary sprigs. Be heart happy!

Art Now is back again

The Art Now exhibit held at Beaver Point in June was heralded as a "feast for the senses."

A new, fall version unfolds again this weekend, with more than 30 accomplished local artists exhibiting their latest works.

"The hall lends itself to the display of such a variety of media," said show co-organizer Jackie Walker.

Work by seven sculptors and three furniture builders will fill the large space, and lend context to the wall art, pottery, photography and weaving, she said.

Also featured are mosaics, lamps, flutes and wearable accessories.

Like the first Art Now show, fine chocolate and desserts will complement the visual treats, along with light dinners, brunches, soups, and hot and cool drinks.

Period live music is also on tap.

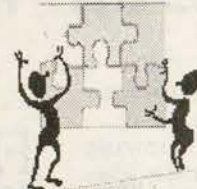

Art Now II opens Friday night at 6 p.m., and runs Saturday and Sunday beginning at 10:30 a.m.

The initial Art Now show was inspired by the life of Paul Hart, a renowned island woodworker and sculptor who died three years ago, and for whom the Hart Memorial Disc Golf Course is named.

Miceli mines creativity with The Spaces Between

By GAIL SJUBERG
Staff Writer

Some artists need regular blasts of intensity to spur their creative output, but for Salt Spring classical guitarist Alan Miceli, creativity rises from a calm and centred place.

And when it comes to capturing expressions of that creativity, patience can lead to perfection.

Inspired by the "go-for-it" attitude of music producer Jordy Sharp, Miceli last month released his first CD of largely original classical and steel-string guitar compositions.

From start to finish, The Spaces Between is both technically and compositionally impeccable.

Miceli's pieces range from the achingly tender While You Were Sleeping, to the dramatic-to-moody Winter and the rhythmic Road Ahead.

The title cut spawns a sensation of alternating deep and minute thoughts swimming in and out of a quiet mind.

Miceli partly credits years of meditation practice with his songwriting success.

"Meditation or any kind of spiritual practice is a great way to unlock one's creativity," he maintains. "It's just a way of connecting with the creative place."

At his well-attended CD release party at ArtSpring last month, Miceli also put his audience through a five-minute meditation before beginning to play, which helped set both performer and audience in a relaxed mood.

While Miceli and Sharp felt a few uptempo songs were needed to help forge a "balanced" CD, they also didn't want to disrupt its calm demeanor.

"Even when I think I'm banging the hell out of the guitar people tell me it's very relaxing," he said.

Miceli's polished result is also not surprising when the care and sheer hard work he embraced is taken into account.

A project Miceli thought would occupy a few months of his life instead engulfed almost three times that amount.

"It was really a lesson in perseverance and patience," he reflected.

Miceli could literally not be released from each song until everything about it felt right.

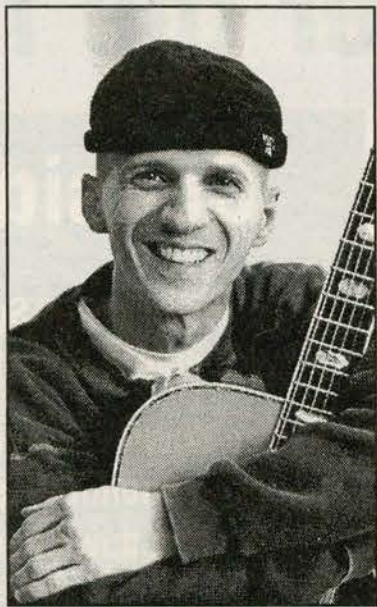

Over and over he would review what had been recorded so far and see where some sculpting was needed.

"You go back and listen again [and see] what's not working, what is working."

He, Sharp and recording technician Andy Bowmer also had to contend with a trademark charm of his chosen instrument.

"One of the technical difficulties of the classical guitar is that it squeaks," he explained.

While the extraneous sounds could be eliminated by recording pieces in phrases, Miceli also used the steel-string guitar to record some compositions usually reserved for the nylon-string classical instrument.

When the colour reproduction of Shari Macdonald's tulip photo for the cover didn't emerge true to the original, he also felt it must be done again.

A similar kind of awareness led to his discovery that "the spaces between" the striking of strings may be as critical as the notes themselves. It came during a concert given by another classical guitarist at a concert in Victoria.

Two pieces by famous composers are also included on the CD. Recuerdos de la Alhambra is a gorgeous Francisco Tarrega guitar piece, which Miceli noted his parents loved.

Miceli also feels attachment to the Prelude of Bach's Cello Suite as transcribed by guitarist Andrés Segovia. ("Guitarists are great thieves," he notes. "We love to steal pieces written for other [instruments].")

As a student of the instrument he has been especially influenced by Christopher Parkening and Alex de Grassi.

He is also grateful to his teachers in the past in Ontario — Norbert Kraft — "one of the best in Canada" — and Dennis Macgreggor, who introduced him to the classical guitar.

Miceli began playing guitar in Sault Ste. Marie, and quickly found himself drawn to the classical style.

"This is really me," he said, referring to the CD music, "and it's always been that way."

Like all musicians, he said, one first has to establish a fine technique which comes from playing other composers' music.

"You have to begin by playing everyone else's music and then at some point you have to drop that and play what is coming out of you. No matter what, you really have to trust your own inner voice."

Miceli has lived on Salt Spring for the past five years, and works as a Roasting Co. pastry chef.

He feels the island's generous creative atmosphere made it easy to tackle a CD.

"People even donated their time because they were excited about the project."

In addition to Macdonald's photography, which Miceli describes as "wonderful," Pat Walker handled the graphic design.

Miceli is particularly grateful to producer Sharp.

"If it wasn't for him it wouldn't have happened."

"He said 'why don't you do a CD?'" recalls Miceli. "My immediate thought was 'what if I spend $5,000 and it turns out to be a disaster?'" He said, "what if it turns out to be great?"

The project didn't even end up ravaging his pocketbook to the degree expected, and it's safe to say it turned out "great."

The Spaces Between is available in Ganges at Blue Moon, Acoustic Planet, Music Emporium and Jill Louise Campbell's gallery, and online through salt-springmusic.com.

Before you vote Consider the facts

Vacation Rentals in Perspective:

1. The number of vacation rentals on Salt Spring has been greatly exaggerated. The Islands Trust states there are 300 – 500 vacation rentals. Thorough research shows approximately 163 current operations.
2. Vacation rentals add $6,000,000 to Salt Spring's annual economy. This activity creates jobs for local people and supports island merchants and artisans. Using conservative estimates, research shows short term vacation rentals add $6,000,000 annually to the economy on Salt Spring Island (excluding return on investment to the owner).
3. Over 70% of vacation rental owners are island residents. Contrary to the contention of current Trustees (and candidate Ellie Thorburn) the vast majority of owners are full time residents. An additional 11% are part time residents of the island.
4. Vacation rentals have a low impact to Salt Spring's infrastructure. They are small-scale, neighborhood based guest accommodation. Visitors are distributed throughout the island where they can enjoy our rural life-style. The Trust's alternative of developing existing commercially zoned land could add up to 700 additional units. These would be high impact, high-density developments and would compete with existing accommodation providers.
5. Vacation rentals are environmentally sound. They do not place an added strain on our island's limited resources, water supply or cause damage to our natural environment. Vacation rentals utilize existing homes, which otherwise would stand empty. The alternative preferred by the Trustees - the construction of new resorts and hotels - will damage our neighbourhoods and our natural environment.
6. Shutting down vacation rental homes will not resolve our island's affordable housing crisis. Trustees Borrowman and Byron themselves have acknowledged in a recent Driftwood article: "It is true that many vacation rentals will never become part of the local residential pool, whether through rental or purchase. And high-cost homes will not convert to low-cost housing."
7. Vacation rentals do not compete with other guest accommodation. Different types of accommodation meet different visitor needs. Vacation rental homes attract visitors for longer periods of time, who seek relaxation in a private setting where they can cook meals, create their own daily rhythms and include their children and pets in an unhurried family vacation. During their stay, they also patronize Island restaurants, galleries and local merchants.
8. Beware of targeting non-residents. Salt Spring competes with many other vacation destinations for tourist dollars and draws visitors from the rest of Canada as well as other countries. Initial research suggests vacationers will go elsewhere if vacation homes are not available here. Furthermore, land ownership and taxation policy falls outside of the Trust's jurisdiction.

Get out and vote!

Please support candidates who are prepared to:

- Resolve conflict between local government and island members
- Place a moratorium on proactive bylaw enforcement, until the OCP can be revisited (scheduled for 2003)
- Address OCP update concerns - existing flaws and changing needs in the areas of:
Farming; water supply, quality and use; environment and tourism

Candidates who demonstrate an active concern over these issues are:

Eric Booth

Kimberly Lineger

Sheri Neilson

Consider...

- Tourism is Salt Spring's only viable industry.
- The Trustees have ignored the economic impact of shutting down vacation rentals.
- False information circulated by Trustees Borrowman and Byron has generated conflict on the Island by setting neighbors against neighbors.
- Borrowman's proposal for legalizing vacation rentals through commercial zoning is detrimental to neighborhoods and will destroy our rural character.
- ASTAR members have unanimously approved self-regulation (adopted a set of Standards of Operations).
- ASTAR believes all complaints must be investigated by the Bylaw Office to determine legitimacy, and dealt with accordingly.

Please visit

The Islands are for everyone,
not just current residents.
We must manage growth in a way that preserves them and the characteristics that make them
attractive to residents and to visitors alike.

Tuned Air offers stirring reverence at weekend concerts

By GAIL SJUBERG
Staff Writer

A performance by a choral group which has in the past accomplished amazing musical feats comes with an unavoidable aura of anticipation.

With a mere mention of the name "Tuned Air," the stage lights blast on with memories of a Broadway show, joint performances with esteemed groups like Chor Leoni and the original musical Worksongs.

While a nucleus of the Tuned Air choir from the late '80s and '90s is certainly still there, the 31-member group audiences saw at ArtSpring on the weekend, under the direction of Cassandra Miller, is basically a new ensemble of islanders.

What remained the same in concerts held Friday and Saturday nights (and in Victoria Sunday afternoon) was a presentation of innovative material performed with conviction and joy.

It was the first full-length concert for the choir

in two years, and the debut of director Miller who has led the group since January.

As illuminated by the concert title, the songs decried political and social injustice, and war, and splashed seeds of hope into our consciousness.

From sizzling spirituals, the ultimate anti-war song (Waltzing Matilda) and echoes of past hopes and struggles, the evening poured a warm and reverential brew for the audience to savour. The result was undeniably stirring.

With barely time to take in the group — strikingly attired in bright-coloured tops and dark pants or skirts — after it first assembled on the risers, we inhaled the thrill of opening notes of the traditional Come By Here spiritual uttered by high school-aged vocalist Aubrey Zacharias.

The choir then added back-up which came off

loose at times and tight at others. It was a cool effect.

Aubrey's father Don Zacharias brought everyone to their feet in mid-first half with his work in an emotional rendering of And the Band Played Waltzing Matilda, as arranged for baritone solo and choir by Miller.

In the fascinating Drinking Gourd song of the "underground railway" that brought Black slaves to Canada, the choir deftly handled elements such as a waterfall-like "follow" phrases and a mountain range of dynamics.

The choir's 12 men took charge with a spirited melody in Umam Uyjabala, with a confident Bo Curtis leading the way. Passages of singing to each other with relaxed posture came off well.

The concert's final piece, Asma Asmaton (Breath of Breaths), was simply spell-binding, with the sections alternating rolling triads and the beelining-to-heaven soprano voice of Tangle Caron.

Don Zacharias prefaced the song with translated lyrics about a woman who had gone to the Nazi's Jewish death camps. The passion of the words upped the voltage on an electrifying piece of music.

"We saw her in an icy square, with a number on her white arm, and a yellow star on her heart. How beautiful is my beloved, who was caressed by her mother and had kisses from her brother. No one knew she was so beautiful."

Special concert guests were the young Salt Spring Centre School Choir, which Miller has also directed since September, and accompanist Karen Arney.

The buoyant singers charmed the crowd with not only the uplifting

Freedom Song and Hebrew Al Shlosha songs they had learned, but with the sweet antics of its younger members. (On Saturday night that included Ella Fisher, age five, who couldn't suppress her urge to "groove," and six-year-old Linda Herbert, who ensured her bow after a stellar solo did not go unnoticed.)

Student Arlo Bryn-Thorn's explanation of Al Shlosha's point — that "the world is sustained by three things: truth, justice and peace" — elicited an audible response of understanding from the audience.

Accompanist Chris Kodaly's solo piano piece, the Brahms Intermezzo Opus 118 #2, wove itself beautifully into the tone of the whole concert.

The evening's flow and placement of pieces probably couldn't have been better.

Sometimes English

choirs have trouble making foreign languages ring true, but that was not the case with Tuned Air and the various African and Hebrew songs they tackled.

As I'm sure Miller and the choir members knew, a few entrances and endings in the largely a capella repertoire were not always crisply bang-on at the Saturday night performance I attended.

That may have been part of a general sense of tentativeness that dusted the evening.

I would have liked to hear more from director Miller — to get a better sense of her personality. Miller's introduction of the Asma Asmaton piece and her love for it was expressed with such eloquence I wanted her to keep talking, and wished she had spoken more before that point.

After the weekend's performance, I'm already looking forward to what Miller, accompanist Kodaly and the new Tuned Air choir will offer next.

Wilderness 'pioneer' gives slide

A talk and slide show given by an extraordinary modern-day pioneer comes to Lions Hall next Thursday night.

Chris Czjakowski (pronounced like the composer Tchaikovsky) became familiar to Morningside radio show listeners in the 1980s with her letters to Peter Gzowski.

They detailed her experiences of building a log house 27 miles from the nearest road in the Coast Range near Bella Coola.

The November 21 slide show and talk begins at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $6.

Czjakowski has written two books about her life and observations in the B.C. wilderness: Cabin at Singing River and Diary of a Wilderness Dweller.

Cabin at Singing River chronicles the creation of her first home, as Morningside listeners may recall.

Diary of a Wilderness Dweller reveals adventures from building a second cabin, situated 20 miles from a road on a high-altitude, fly-in lake.

"Living at such an altitude and so far from a road gives Chris a unique opportunity to study the wildlife in an area which has had so little documentation that much of it remains unnamed," states publicity material.

In addition to writing and giving slide shows, Czjakowski also takes artists and naturalists on backpacking trips in the mountains around her home.

Make your final appeal — why should readers select you as a Survivor? How much whining and snivelling is allowed here? I'm a good sport! I did my share!! I cooked and fed them!! I taught them golf!! I didn't get grumpy!! My scholarship fund needs the cash!

The rescue boat is in sight. What will you leave behind on this deserted island, as a symbol that you were here?

Nothing - I'll know I was there and that's enough for me!

SID FILKOW

THIRD VOTED OFF!
Hard to believe that with 3 castaways voted off the island, two are "The Geezers"! The latest to go is Sid Filkow, comments from the voting public included "Sid's lost his sense of humour and his chance to survive!", "Your answers aren't your usual wit. Sid, you're so off this island!", and "Eeny, Meeny, Miney, Mo."

So now the North moves ahead of the South 3 to 2! Vote soon by clipping the ballot on this page and leave in the ballot box at any of the participating Survivor businesses. MAGGIE MACWARBEY

FIRST VOTED OFF!
Alas, Maggie MacWarbey that playful siren from the south end becomes the first to be cast off of beautiful Salt Spring Island. First-cousin to Arvid Chalmers (see the resemblance?) Maggie was in a virtual dead heat with Dave Phillips & finished only 1 vote ahead. Tribal Council re-counted 3 times, to no avail.

Comments from the voters who voted Maggie off included: "Eliminate this beauty & make room for other babes on the beach.", "She can't be for real", "Bad Disguise", "Nice, but who likes ironing as a hobby?" Remember to clip out the ballot on this page & vote off the castaway of your choice at any of the participating Survivor businesses. Remember 1 ballot per week, per reader. Extra ballots in stores! The last castaway wins $500 for their favorite charity!

VALDY

SIXTH VOTED OFF!
Valdy becomes the 6th victim of this North-South stand-off!

Comments from the voters who voted Valdy off included: "Sorry Valdy...love ya but you live on the wrong side!", "Singing the blues honey?", "Time to move on...leave on a good note". It is now down to the bitter end. This will be your last chance to cast a vote & determine who "reigns" on Salt Spring. Remember to clip out the ballot on this page & vote off the castaway of your choice at any of the participating Survivor businesses. Remember 1 ballot per week, per reader. Extra ballots in stores! Island 'elves' launch annual Santa's Workshop

Though the stunning autumn weather might still be luring tropical birds into the area and coaxing exotic flowers out of bloom, Christmas is only a sleigh-bell's tinkling away.

Community-minded individuals are already dusting off their elf caps in preparation for the work ahead.

The local organization Santa's Workshop is ready to accept donations of new and gently used toys to help families with tight budgets provide Christmas presents for children each year.

"We get a tremendous satisfaction out of doing it," said chief elf Judy Willett.

Along with "Santa" Bob Appleton and a tinker's toolbox full of other helpers, the two have been working to provide Christmas toys to children for many years.

"We concentrate on the age group of true believers," Appleton said. "These days I think that goes from age four to age four and a half," he laughed.

Appleton was first recruited to help out with the project through Community Services by Santa's Workshop founder Carol Simpson 14 years ago.

Simpson started the project in 1987 with the aim of finding homes for refurbished toys.

"One day she was cleaning out her toy cupboard prior to Christmas and she was about to dump out some high-quality toys. It occurred to her that she could give these toys to others," he said.

When Simpson needed to hand over the reins, Appleton didn't hesitate to say, "Yes." Two years later, Willett joined Appleton in the workshop.

With community support, they've provided toys to 60-70 families each year. And sometimes there are four to five children in a family, Appleton said.

The Santa's Workshop team has also been assisted by a number of other elves who wash toys, make doll clothing and sort donated gifts for the age and gender of recipient children.

Events such as the Salt Spring Toy Run, conducted by local motorcycle riders, and the liquor store donation program have also provided the workshop with many lovely toys that will help supply the need for island families.

"At one time the Golden Hands ladies used to make doll's clothes," Willett said.

But the group of women who made miraculous doll restorations have been increasingly less active in recent years due to advancing age, she said.

Children's interests in toys have also shifted away from dolls, Willett said.

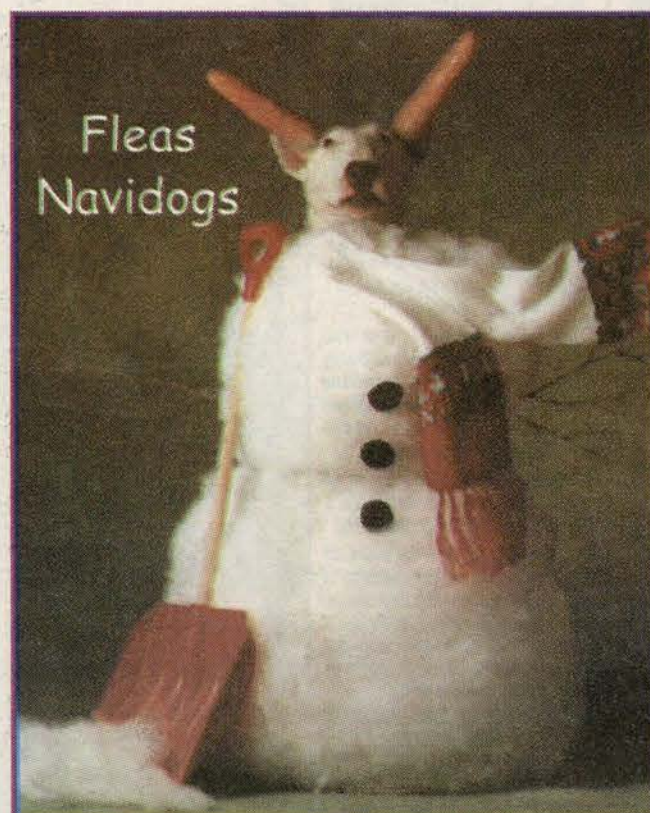

"We've found over the years that tastes have changed. Girls that used to play with dolls play with Barbies," said Appleton.

"My grandchildren, all they do is play with com-

"We used to get Viewmasters but they're passé now," Appleton chuckled.

In recent years the elves have had the best successes with lightly used toys such as stuffed animals, plastic dinosaurs, farm sets, toy trucks and unmarked books.

Among new donations, gift certificates for movies are quite popular and the workshop can always use more batteries.

"I can't play with the toys if they don't have batteries," Appleton said.

Clothing donations have proven to be tricky, he said. "A six-year-old can come in 14 different sizes."

For benefactors who would like a little more guidance, the Angel Tree program at the CIBC bank allows patrons to select a tag with the age and gender of a child that is hoping for gifts.

Donated toys can then be dropped off in marked boxes at the CIBC, Mouat's, Ganges Village Market, the Salt Spring Waterworks office or either branch of Pharmasave.

Pre-wrapped toys are gratefully appreciated but they should be labelled for the age and gender to help volunteers.

This year Gulf Islands Secondary Student Brittany Grundy will be organizing a team of high-school girls to help families collect their presents at the Community Centre on December 16-18.

The deadline for donations is December 15.
